The Mikado's Review.
Justice, Exact, Is Rare.
Our Average Citizen.
Eat Slowly.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1927).

JAPAN'S new Emperor Hirohito will review his navy. Warships, submarines, almost as big as battleships, and fighting airplanes will show the Mikado what he could do.

A MOCK attack will be made on Japan's northern naval base and chiefly offense will consist of bomb dropping planes. Japan did not invent the flying machine, but realizes its power, and knows that floating steel targets cannot stand against swift, bomb-dropping airplanes.

EXACT justice is rare. T. F. Armstrong beat his daughters, 13 and 15 years old, savagely, and was freed on probation. The judge regretted that he could not have Armstrong flogged as he had flogged his daughters.

Mr. Bash, who helped to pour gasoline on a dog, setting fire to it, burning the dog so horribly that it had to be killed, was fined [illegible]. What would you have done in those child-beating, dog burning cases? The second judge, of course, did not regret that he couldn't pour gasoline on the man and set fire to him. Justice imitating the criminal, as when it hangs a murderer, is no remedy for crime. The remedy is education, and that is slow.

A GENTLEMAN, looking the field over, carefully finds the average American citizen the keeper of a "one man clothing store" in a small town. He belongs to a church but does not go regularly, has an "average education," which means none to speak of, takes little interest in anything except his family and his business, never reads the foreign news, just goes through life very much like any chicken in his chicken yard, if he has a chicken yard. Fortunately for the nation it is not made up exclusively of average citizens.

GARNETT WRIGHT, British expert in surgical pathology, says something that fifty million Americans should remember, "eating rapidly is the most common cause of stomach ulcers." Napoleon, who boasted that he never spent more than ten or twelve minutes at a meal, died of ulcers of the stomach in his St. Helena prison. He should have remembered the wise old French saying diner bien jase, est moitie digere. "A dinner well talked is half digested." Allowing thirty minutes more for slow eating with friendly talk means adding years to your life.

THE United States Labor Bureau says American women spend $5,000,000 a day, $1,825,000,000 a year, on beauty shops and aids to beauty. Women spending the five million a day would be more beautiful, if they kept the money. But spending it makes them happy, and happiness is worth its price.

CONRAD ZELLER, 65 years old, father of 20 children, retires from postoffice work on a pension of $60 a month. His average pay from Uncle Sam during 28 years was $55 a month.

Not very generous from a country rich enough to let its women spend eighteen hundred millions a year on wrinkle eradication, face lifting, artificial curls and complexion.

JUDGE LINDSEY of Colorado investigates the troubles, temptations and morals of youth, and the possibility of finding a semi-mat-

GRAYSON PLANE HOPS OFF, THEN RETURNS

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Oct. 22.—The second attempt of the amphibian plane Dawn to fly across the Atlantic ended abruptly at 6:33 a. m. today when the twin-motored plane—carrying Mrs. Frances Grayson and two companions—landed in the water about 100 yards off the beach at 6:33 a. m.

The big plane had difficulty this morning. On the first attempt at a take-off the plane ran about two miles down the beach and was unable to rise.

Then, when the take-off was finally made at 6:16 a. m., the plane skimmed along about 25 or 50 feet above the water and finally circled towards Castro Bay.

A few minutes later watchers saw the plane again coming towards Old Orchard and as it was about 100 yards from the shore it suddenly nosed towards the water and landed. The plane was taxied in from the water and brought onto the beach.

The crowd on the beach, numbering about 200 people, rushed to the plane and pressed around it.

Mrs. Grayson climbed from the cabin.

"We got as far as Cape Elizabeth light," she said, "but the load was

60,000 TO SEE TITLE CLASH

Favored by ideal weather, with a warm sun tempering the October breezes, the University of Pittsburgh-Carnegie Tech football battle for the collegiate championship of the city, in the Pitt Stadium this afternoon, drew a crowd of nearly 60,000 persons.

The descent on the bowl began at the noon hour and continued in a never-ending procession of automobiles, street cars and men and women and children on foot.

The battle for local supremacy on the gridiron stood out as one of the chief features of a brilliant card of contests listed about the country, which included some 18 to 20 major engagements. So far as Pittsburgh and environs are concerned, it loomed as the ONLY big game on the day's card.

Much has been written, much has been told and much has been passed from mouth to mouth on this epic of our local gridiron. Pitt, with an eleven that is ranked with the best in the land, and today, as it takes the field against the ever stubborn and ever dangerous Tartans, is being eyed throughout the land as a potential national champion, is a gambling favorite to beat the Skiboes. Pitt has a powerful line, a dashing, crushing backfield, led by the gallant and well night unstoppable Welch, and the line battering Booth. So far, Pitt has been unscored on, and have piled up a total of 153 points in four games. They have been able to score at least 32 points against every team played.

TARTANS DANGEROUS

Tech, with five gaping holes made by the loss of Mefort, Donohoe, Goodwin, Yoder and Mamby, has been defeated once and scored on twice, by W. & J. and by Thiel. The Skibo play in the four games past has been just fair, nothing sensational and nothing of which to be particularly ashamed.

You cannot and must not base conjectures on past records or potential powers when doping a Pitt-Tech battle. The greatest Pitt team in history was lucky to eke out a 13-7 win over Tech. Powerful Panther elevens

No Word From Ruth

Until Ruth Elder reaches Lisbon she will probably be unable to give to the world further chapters of her thrilling rescue by a tanker crew after her plane, the American Girl, was forced down as the climaxing thriller of her trans-Atlanntic flight. The ship on which the aviatrix and her pilot, George Haldeman, are being taken to Lisbon from the Azores does not have facilities for transmitting Ruth's throbbing account of the flight as she is writing it. By the time she reaches Lisbon, where cheering crowds await her the chapters of her story which deal with the rescue at sea and the destruction by fire of her beloved plane will have been written and she will be able to cable this part of her story to America.

JAWORSKI, IN JAIL HERE, FACES FIGHT FOR LIFE

Back behind grim iron bars, in the most inacessible section of the Allegheny county jail, Sam Jaworski, accused of dealing in robbery, murder and fraternal devotion, greeted the dawn today while the inexorable machinery of law set about the business of demanding his life.

Jaworski was brought back from Detroit last night. Manacled to two detectives and guarded by three others, the man to whom a brother's freedom outweighed all the terror that death might hold, lost his battle against extradition, lost his last hope that somewhere along the route, in some way those pals of the "gang," who speak their thoughts with bullets, would deliver him from the law before the iron-grilling of a jail closed behind him.

He had done as much for his brother, Paul, and John Vasbinder, convicted murderers, when they were held in the county jail here. He had gone into the very den of his social enemies "with four guns," as he wrote to a pal, Jim Mesheek in Montevideo, Uruguay. "I will give two to Paul and two for myself," he wrote. "We are going to shoot our way out. If we get out, we may be

2 THUGS ROB GIRL

The bank deposit of the Stoecklein Brothers Bakery, at 7020 Spencer avenue, East End, amounting to $183 cash and $350 in checks, was stolen today by two armed men, who held up Miss Elizabeth Cook, 22, of 1331 Lincoln avenue, a clerk in the bakery, at Spencer street and Lincoln avenue, as she was on her way to the East End Savings & Trust Company. The men escaped.

The holdup occurred at 10:15 with a half dozen persons within sight of the corner. The girl battled with the robbers until they threw her to the sidewalk and broke her hold on the bag containing the funds.

In speeding from the scene of the holdup, the car driven by the robbers struck a telephone pole and was wrecked at Lincoln avenue and Meadow street. The occupants leaped from the car and disappeared. The car, police believe, was stolen in Carnegie.

FOUND DEAD AFTER BEATING

With only the delirious talk of a dying man as clues members of the city detective homicide squad are seeking the murderers of John Bishop, 65, of 1107 Liverpool street. Bishop died in his room late yesterday as the result of a beating. His last words, heard by Dr. J. E. Weigel, of 516 Federal street, were a mumbled and disconnected story of how three Negroes had attacked him.

WOMAN'S DEATH LOOMS AS UNSOLVED MURDER

RUSSELLTON MINERS -:- EVICTED, BUILD BARRACKS -:- AGAINST WINTER

HOME

Russellton women and children gathered in a field which soon will be their front yard.

LENDING A HAND

Sturdy helpers are these youngsters who carry lumber from the road to their fathers and older brothers working on the buildings which will house them during the coming winter. In the background are seen some of the company houses which will be vacated next month. Regardless of their misfortune these youngsters are apparently happy.

DETERMINED SEX

Everybody helps. This comely damsel with saw and determination helps to build a home for her family and herself. She is not the only girl at work, there being almost as many of her sex on the job as men.

EVERYBODY WORKS

Everybody works—even mother. Here is a mother of seven at work with hammer and nails, driving sheeting into place in the building which will soon house her husband and brood. If they can't wield a hammer or use a saw, the women help to carry lumber, as at the top. They work all day long, and seem to enjoy it.

NURSES, TOO

A casualty! The miners' wives and daughters serve as nurses on the job, too, and they know how to take care of a smashed finger just as well as the most experienced.

Appeals in Vote Case Likely

Pleas for new trials, based in part on "a verdict against the evidence," were looked for today in the North Side election fraud case of 1926 in which three persons were found guilty yesterday. The defendants were at liberty under bail bonds today, those of Fire Captain Charles Golden and William Bolster having been set at $3,000 each and that of Mrs. Anna Conklin at $1,000. Sentence will be pronounced later.

It also is believed that politicians involved in the mass of informations made in connection with alleged irregularities in the recent primary may interest themselves in an appeal of the North Side case on a theory that it may be considered something of a precedent for the disposition of the new cases.

SEE WOMAN'S DEATH AS UNUSUAL MURDER

SHARON, Pa., Oct. 22.—Baffled at every turn in trying to solve the mystery surrounding the death of Mrs. Martha Truxell, 75, whose body was found floating in Shenango River, below West Middlesex, Thursday afternoon, Coroner William McGrath still believes the woman was murdered, due to the fact that no water was found in the lungs. The condition of the body, which had been in the water about a week, prevented determining whether there were marks of violence.

That Mrs. Truxell, who left the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter McCrea, Marshall avenue, Pittsburgh, October 10 to visit her granddaughter, Mrs. Margaret Day, in Youngstown, still was in Farrell as late as October 14, was determined by the posting of a letter to her brother, Calvin Davis, of Volant, on that date. A letter to Mrs. Day postmarked October 12 made no mention of why she had not gone to Youngstown. No person has been found who saw the aged woman in Sharon or Farrell, nor can relatives explain her presence in the vicinity of West Middlesex.

Funeral services were held here this morning and the body taken to Conneautville for burial.

Drop Chief Of Mifflin Police

There was secrecy and mystery hovering today over the suspension of A. W. Batchen, chief of Mifflin township police, in a star chamber session of the police committee of the township's board of commissioners last night.

Two theories predominated. One was that the committee had acted on Batchen's own recommendation made October 8, when he declared that with the closing of the township amusement parks, the services of one patrolman could be dispensed with. Another said that it was the theft of a still and moonshine stored in the township jail for evidence which led directly to Batchen's downfall. The theft occurred Monday.

In any event, a large crowd awaiting the decision, showed their feeling in the matter by booing lustily when it was announced. Batchen, who also is town constable, polled one of the largest votes ever recorded in Mifflin township for re-election at the September primaries.

down there to see you within a short time and if we don't get out, we will be in the graveyard."

That is Sam Jaworski, gambler in life and death, and he expected no less of his pals.

But this time, they failed and today he is in the jail from which he bought freedom for Jaul and John by shooting two guards. A half dozen crimes, mostly payroll holdups, including that of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation at Mollenauer December 24, 1925, in which I. L. Gump, guard, was murdered, and the robbing of the same company at Coverdale March 11, 1927.

1,500 CARAT DIAMOND, SECOND LARGEST, FOUND

JOHANNESBURG, Oct. 22.—The second largest alluvial diamond ever unearthed has been found by a digger in the Lichtenburg district. It weighs 1,500 carats, but is of poor quality. The record is held by the famous Cullinan diamond.

DAWN FLIGHT FAILS

too heavy and the plane was in danger of becoming unmanageable, so we had to turn back.

"We had to dump about 200 gallons of gasoline, in order to stay up."

Two dump valves on the gas tanks were open when the plane came onto the beach.

The trouble was the same as that which caused the Dawn to return to Old Orchard on its previous attempt.

Even the second false start failed to discourage Mrs. Grayson.

Scarcely had she alighted from the Dawn than she announced a third attempt would be made about 3 p. m. today.

"We will try to reduce the load about 200 pounds," she said, "and if the weather continues good should be able to get away this afternoon.

"There is no serious trouble with the weight to the plane and if the load is cut to that extent we should be able to fly all right."

Weather conditions this morning were the most favorable since Mrs. Grayson came here, October 10.

BIG AUTOMOTIVE YEAR IS SEEN BY WILMER

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—A big year for the automotive industry in particular and business in general was predicted by E. G. Wilmer, president of Dodge Brothers, Inc., who returned from Europe on the Acquitania.

Wilmer was convinced, too, that the American automotive industry will continue to dominate the world for many years because "through use of electric power, automatic machinery and mass sales method, our manufacturers have placed their product far ahead of the European both in quality and price."

A buying boom is looked for in the car industry by Wilmer. "Due," he said, "largely to the transition at the Ford plant, automobile production for the entire industry has fallen off more than 630,000 for the first nine months of 1927, and this represents an accumulation of orders—those of perhaps a million people who will soon be ready to buy."

MEXICO REPORT ON AIR TRANSPORTATION READY

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 22.—The department of communications, it was announced, will submit a report within the next few days on the feasibility of aerial transportation to various parts of the country. The report will give the result of a survey recently made and will contain suggestions as to the terms under which the government can grant concessions for aerial transportation.

When picked up in Bidwell street several days ago, Bishop at first said he had been injured in a fall. He had two black eyes, his left shoulder was dislocated and several ribs were fractured. As he was dying he mumbled the story of being attacked by three Negroes.

An autopsy performed at the morgue revealed that death had been caused by pneumonia superinduced by fractured ribs. Coroner W. J. McGregor notified the homicide squad when it was revealed that Bishop had been beaten to death.

AUTOS CRASH; TWO ESCAPE

A laceration of the left index finger was the only injury suffered by Paul Scarpini, 21, of 405 North avenue, Verona, and William Weyman, Jr., 21, of 740 Ross avenue, Wilkinsburg, escaped without a scratch, although their automobiles were overturned this morning in a collision at Fulton street and Western avenue.

THIEVES FIRE HOUSE TO COVER ROBBERY

Thieves who ransacked the home of Mabel Pecuro, at 262 Stella street, are blamed for a fire which damaged the hom slightly last night. Following the fire, which was quickly extinguished, Miss Pecuro said she discovered that $200 wa missing.

Police are investigating a theory that the robbers started the fire to cover the robbery.

While S. A. Henzberger of Cathedral Mansions, Ellsworth avenue slept last night, a sneak thief crawled through a window in his apartment and stole Henzberger's trousers. One of the pockets contained $25, Henzberger reported to police.

CLEAR DRIVER IN FATAL CRASH

William Rogers, Coraopolis, today in Criminal Court was acquitted on a charge of involuntary manslaugther in the death of John Stockunas, 18, Bell Telephone Company lineman.

Stockunas was struck by an auto driven by J. Douglas Hague, 824 East End avenue, after Hague's car had been nipped by a machine driven by Rogers. Rogers' defense was that he was not aware of having forced the Hague car into Stockunas, who was pinned between a pole and the machine.

rimonial substitute for outright immorality. An Oregon clergyman calls Lindsey "morally unfit to teach the youth of our state." The same was said of the founder of Christianity nineteen hundred years ago, and of Socrates, still earlier.

Lindsey is fortunate they can call him "unfit," but cannot crucify him, or make him drink hemlock. Times are better, for reformers.

No substitute will be found for marriage which is man's best training school. But, "prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

THE State of Illinois cannot quite make up its mind to hang a woman. Mrs. Cassler, who was to have been hanged yesterday, learns the ceremony is postponed for one week. Illinois has never hanged a woman, and should not begin in 1927.

Anybody who believes that choking a woman to death at the end of a rope will help society or discourage crime is not much more intelligent than the person strangled.

HERRICK TO QUIT AS ENVOY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France at the start of the World War, and who returned to Paris in 1921, has signified to President Coolidge his desire to be relieved of his post as soon as the administration can conveniently choose his successor, it was learned here today.

Advancing years and ill health have been ascribed as the causes Ambassador Herrick returned from France in mid-summer and since that time has undergone two operations. His recovery has been slow, and his general condition is such that he has yielded to the advice of friends and relatives that he should give up his post. He recently passed his seventy-third year.

No announcement has been made of the ambassador's decision, and it is probable that none will be made until Washington is ready to announce at the same time his successor. Officially, Ambassador Herrick is recuperating from an illness and expects to resume his post sometime before the end of the year, but it is understood that if he returned to France at all it will only be to wind up his affairs there.

One of the leading candidates for the post is now a member of the cabinet—Dwight W. Davis, Secretary of War. Representations in Secretary Davis' behalf have already been made to the White House, although with what success has not been determined.

Another possible candidate is George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, who retired from the Senate following his defeat in the Pennsylvania primary. Pepper, who was supported politically by the Mellon organization in Pennsylvania, also is considered "available."

Vote Probe Spotlight Shifts

The spotlight of Pittsburgh's primary election investigation focused on the Fourth District, Fourteenth Ward, and the Second District, Twenty-fifth Ward, today as ballot boxes impounded in those districts were brought in to the Bonsall committee for recount.

Petitions affecting these districts were filed in court yesterday on the heels of a report from the recounting committee that additional miscounting had been found in a check of the Thirtieth District, Fourteenth Ward, Pittsburgh, and the First District, Fourth Ward, Homestead. The committee found an error in printing on the ballots for the Thirtieth District which they felt accounted for the discrepancies there. In the Homestead district, the committee found every candidate for judicial and county offices had been given fewer votes than actually cast. Altered ballots also were reported.

The independent probe of alleged padded registration lists in the First Ward, Pittsburgh, continued today following the striking off of five additional names following hearings before the Pittsburgh registration committee last night. This probe is being conducted at the instance of Alderman A. M. Maloney.

Printing of ballots for the November election was in progress today. The order is for 500,000 official ballots and 100,000 specimen ballots.

Capt. Golden will continue as head of Engine Company No. 46, Sandusky street, at least until an appeal in his cases is decided, Richard L. Smith, chief engineer of the fire bureau, announced.

McGovern Called 'Rat' Before Police

Assistant Superintendent of Police Leo Coleman attacked C. C. McGovern, independent candidate for county commissioner, in the course of an address delivered to 100 patrolmen assembled in the South Side Police Station for fall inspection yesterday.

"McGovern was once an officer like yourself," he said. "He seems to have forgotten it since his rise in the world. He is the man who would make you stand in court all day as a witness and receive no fee. He is no friend of the policeman."

Coleman charged McGovern, as an officer on the Mexican border, had "tied one of his men down in the burning sand and told him he was going to let the fleas eat him." He declared that, in the escape of the Biddle boys, McGovern had walked to where one of the fugitives lay dying and put two more bullets into him.

"I've heard him called a rat and I think he is a rat," Coleman added.

"McGovern is a private detective," he said. "You men know what that is—a person without principles or scruples."

Coleman and Inspector J. J. McArdle urged the police to make a house-to-house canvass against McGovern and Shields and in the interests of Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and E. V. Babcock, "two highly respected men who are your friends."

Rogers in Plane Chases Wolves Across West

WILL ROGERS.

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Oct. 22.—Had the greatest kick flying I ever had. All the way across Wyoming we chased wolves and antelopes. Home for dinner last night. Left Tuesday morning from Beverly, spent one night and half day in New York City and back in Beverly Friday afternoon. Have been away only three nights.

If you had left Los Angeles on the train at the same time I did by plane, you wouldn't even arrive in New York till Saturday morning, and, boy, what pilots those air mail babies are. Lindberg comes from a great school.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

P. S.—This Las Vegas, you will hear a lot of it when Boulder Dam is built. We just flew all over and around it. It certainly should be built. The man that never saw it by air never saw it.

NOTE IN BOTTLE FISHED OUT OF RIVER HERE

A bottle containing a note reading, "October 20, 1927, Elizabeth, Pa. Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home," apropos of nothing at all, apparently, was fished out of the Monongahela River by C. L. Williams.

EXPECT TO MARKET PLANES

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(AP.)—Striving for leadership in what she believes will become one of the greatest industries of the future, Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson, an enterprising young business woman, planned a "safe and sane" trans-Atlantic flight.

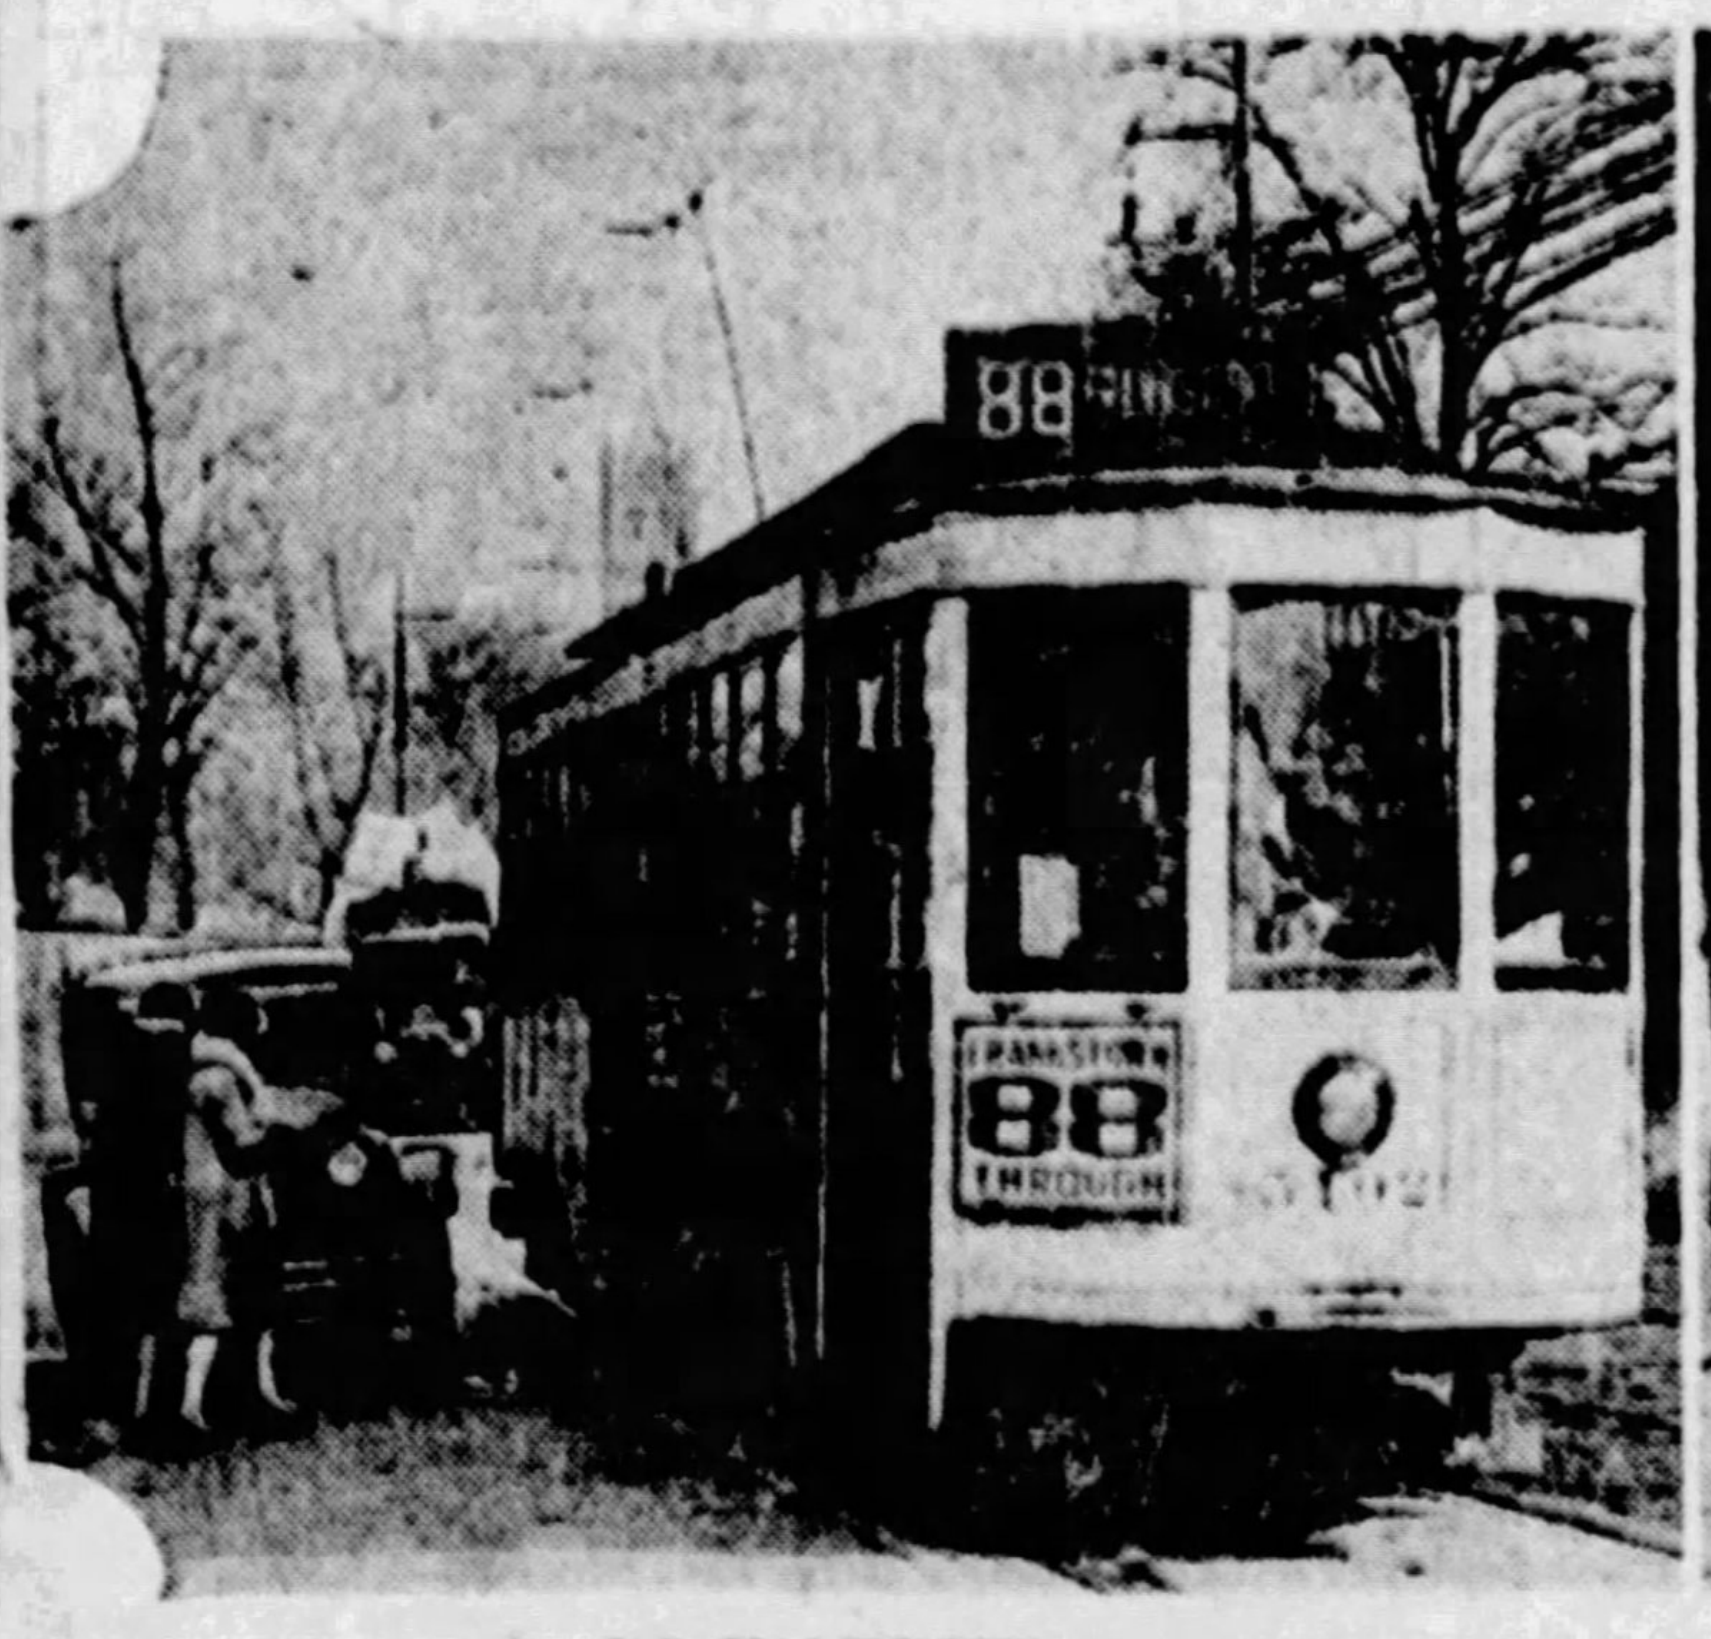
Giving up a profitable real estate business—she claims to have sold $2,000,000 worth of property in the last two years—she formed a partnership with Mrs. Aage Ancker and ordered the large Sikorsky amphibian plane, specifying that it should be seaworthy and landworthy as well as airworthy.

Having gained prestige in aviation by demonstrating that trans-oceanic flying can be made practical, she hopes, as manager of the Ancker-Grayson Aircraft Corporation, to market planes on a grand scale.

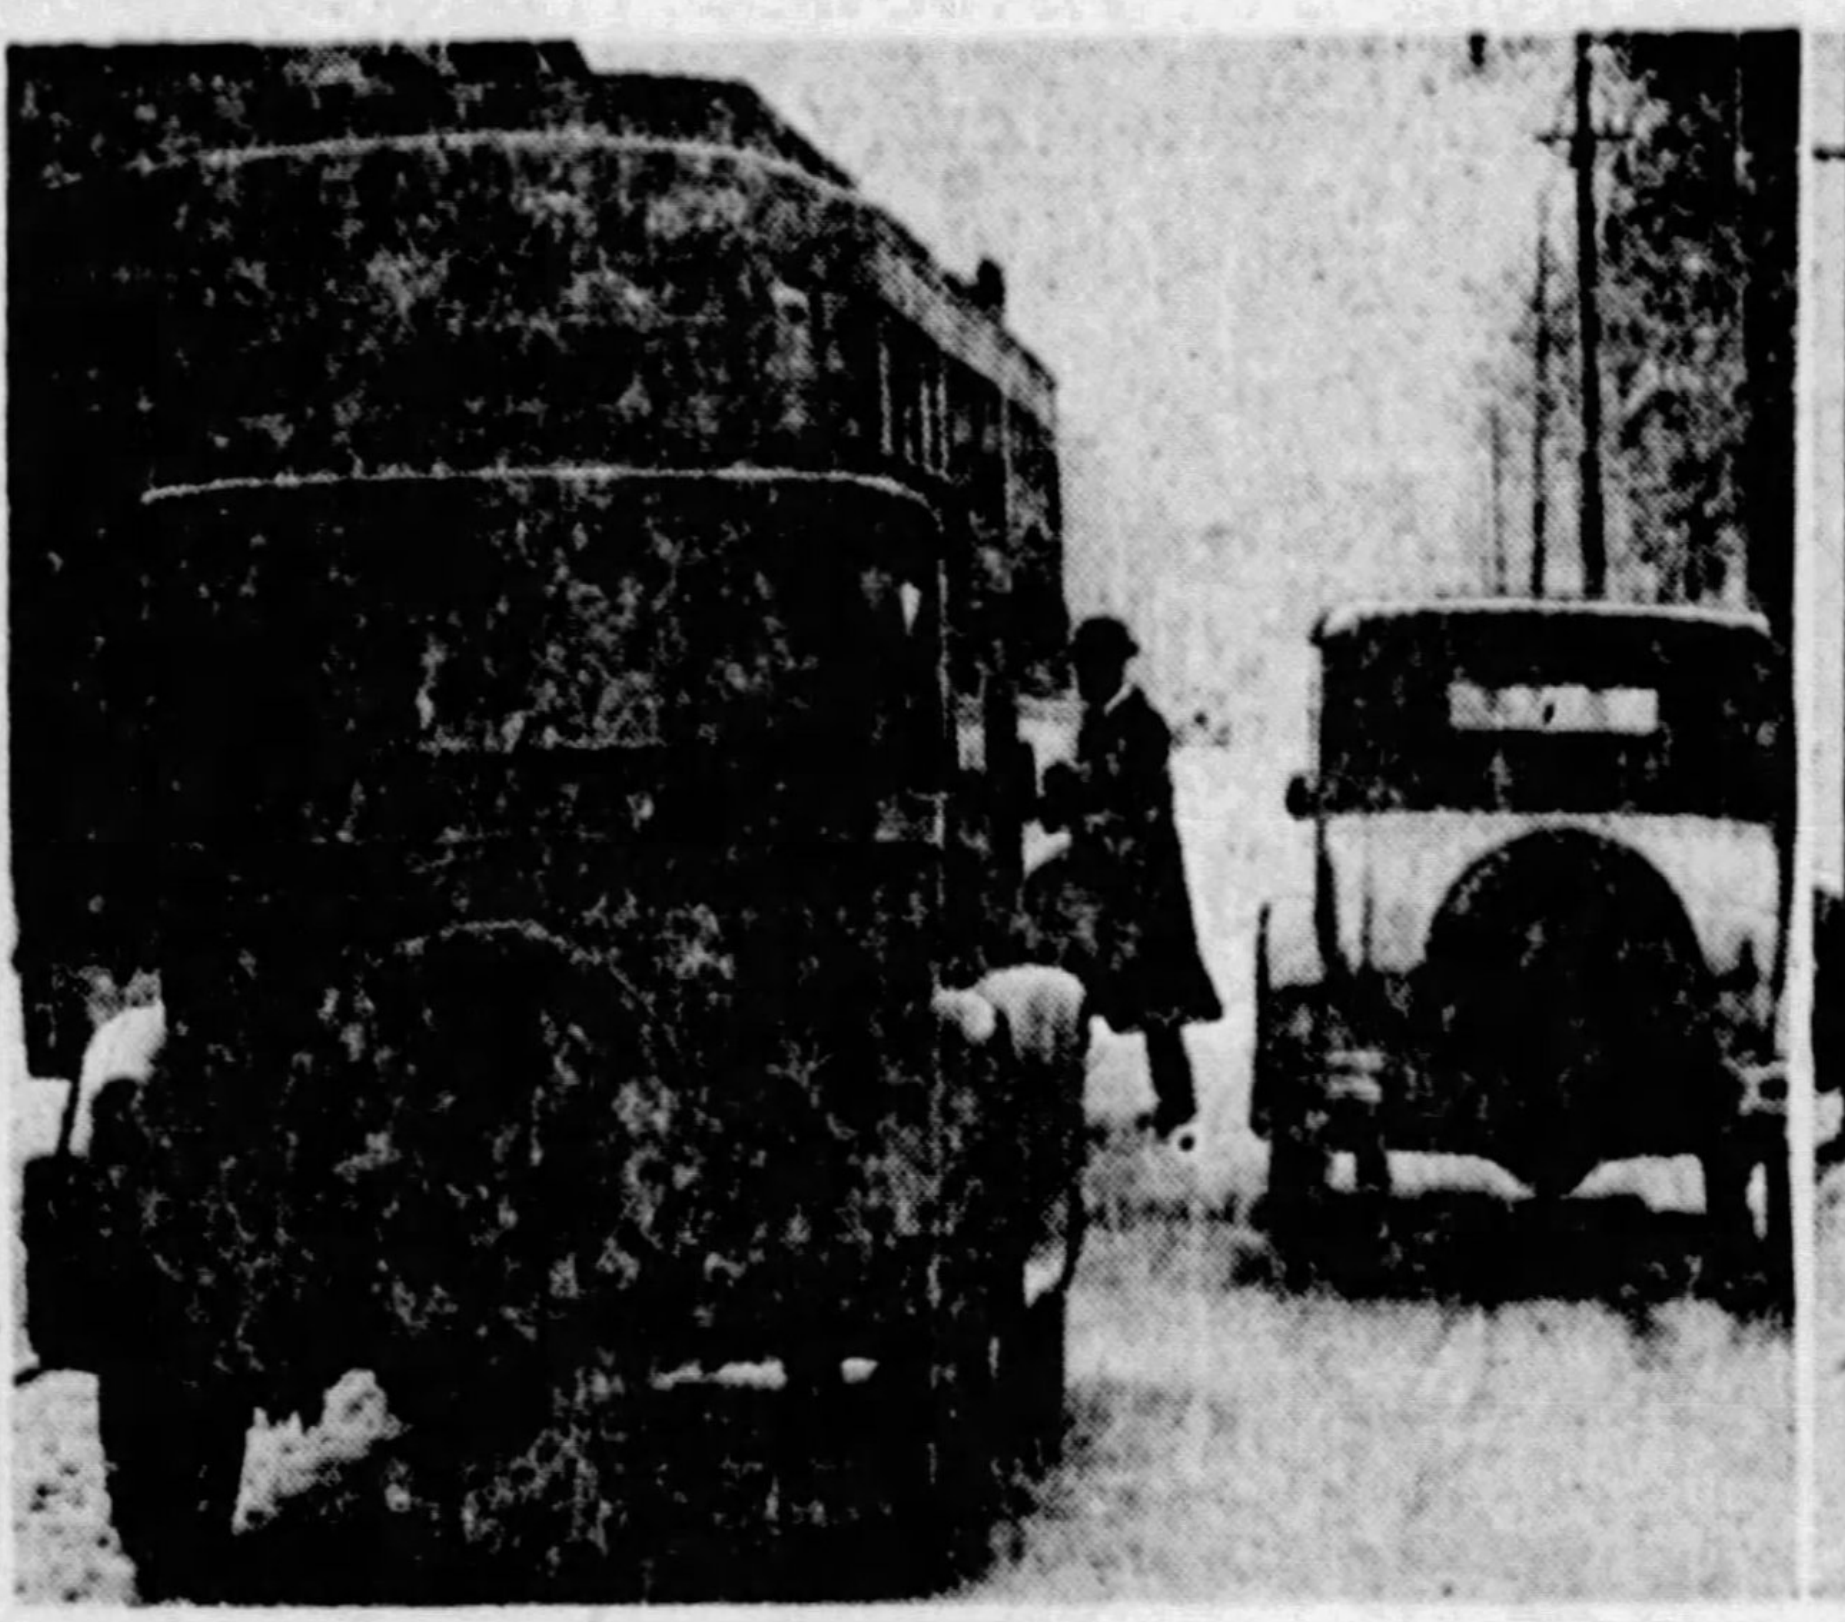
Mrs. Ancker, wife of a Danish sportsman and daughter of the wealthy Spang family of Pittsburgh, is waiting to receive her partner in Copenhagen. The two women invested $12,000 in the big Sikorsky amphibian, and expected the flight would cost an additional $20,000.

Mrs. Aage Ancker, Mrs. Frances Grayson's financial backerd in the trans-Atlantic flight, is the former Miss Mabel Spang, of Pittsburgh, only daughter of E. H. Spang, of the family from which Spang, Chalfant & Co., manufacturer of steel and wrought iron tubular products, derives its name. Mr. Ancker is her second husband. None of the members of her family now resides in Pittsburgh.

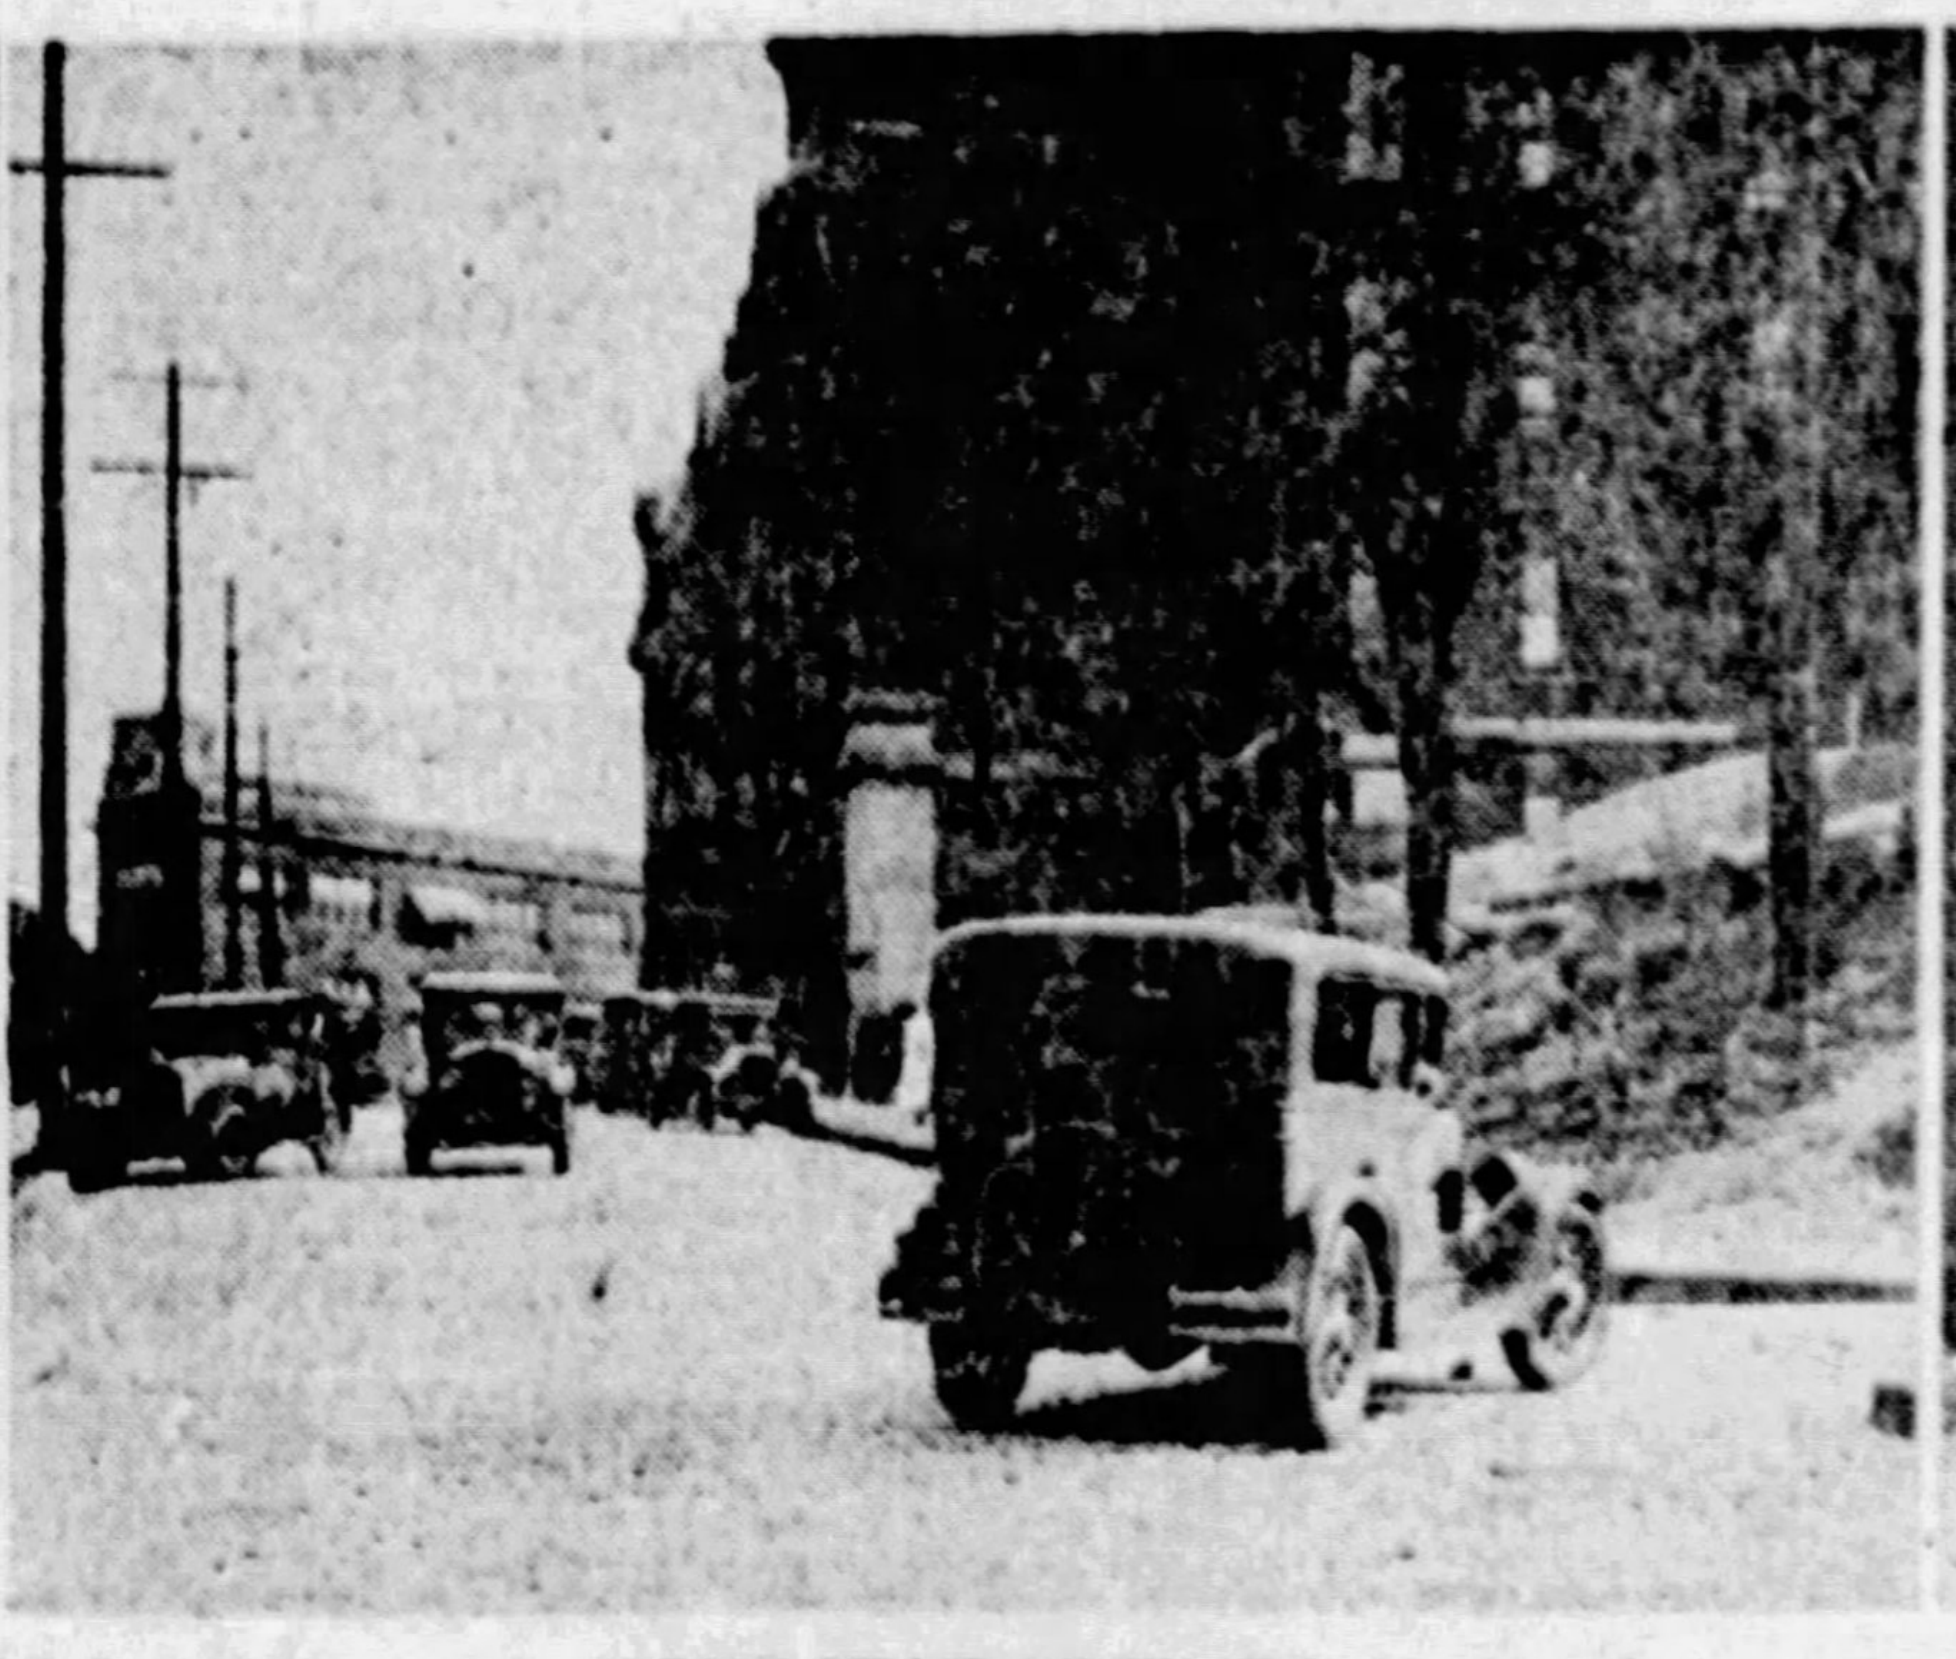
SIGNS FOR SAFETY -:- STILL NEEDED HERE -:- CAMERAMAN FINDS



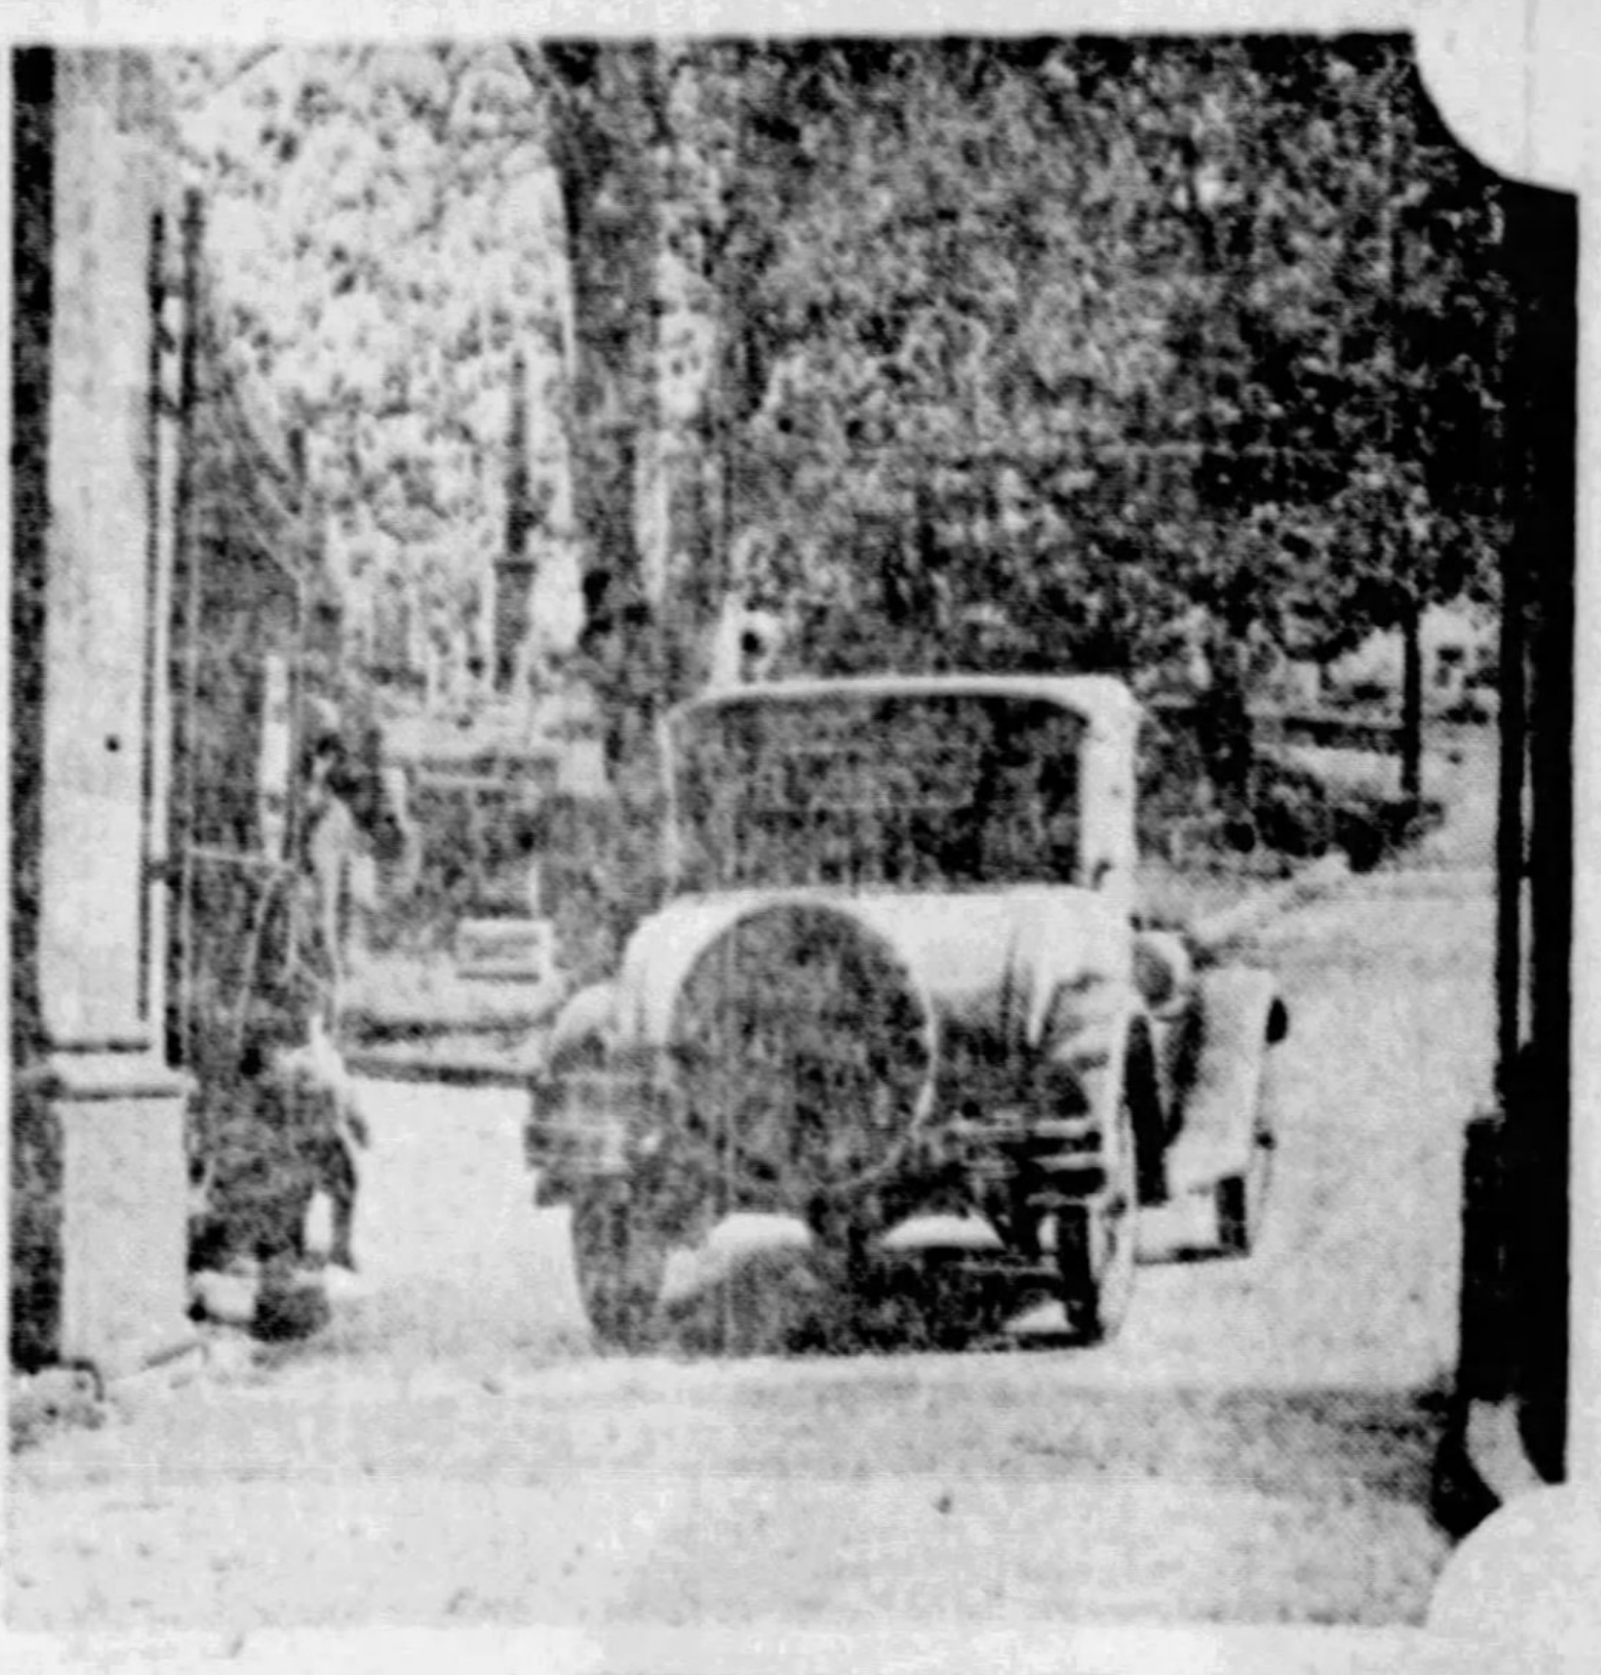
NO WARNING
This is a danger point at the gates of St. Mary's Cemetery, Penn avenue, where motorists sometimes whiz by a street car discharging passengers. There is no warning it is a car stop except the little black and white sign on the trolley wire.



SIGN OBLITERATED
The same condition exists at Pearl street and Penn avenue at the gates of the Allegheny Cemetery. A warning sign in the road way is almost obliterated, but a faint cross and the figure two can be made out, indicating two deaths at this point. Residents of the neighborhood declare there have been more casualties than this.



ONE WAY SECRET?
Forty-fifth street from Penn avenue to Geneva street in front of the St. Francis Hospital is a one-way street, but there is no sign anywhere along Fory-fifth street to warn the driver and many motorists attempting to go through to Penn avenue get into difficulty. A sign at Geneva street would alleviate misunderstanding.



THEY BACK UP
Here's another place where motorists get fooled. Many turn up Forty-sixth street from Butler street to get to Penn avenue, but unexpectedly run into barred gates at the lower entrance to St. Mary's Cemetery, where the street ends. There is no warning.

THE SUN TELEGRAPH MELODY WAY CLUB

SEVENTH LESSON

Copyright, 1927, by W. Otto Miessner

I would wager that the first thing you did when you picked up the seventh lesson was to look for the answers to your M. I. Q. test! With five points for each question answered correctly, how did you rank? How many 100 per centers in the Melody Way Club?

Just to keep you all "on your toes" and help you to check up on yourselves, I shall ask you 10 test questions at the end of this lesson. You can find the answers somewhere in the preceding lessons if you cannot recall them without this review. Then, at the end of the twelfth lesson, we will have a Grand Final Test. This you must promise to take without a pony—"on your honor!"

It should give you a feeling of satisfaction to recall the many things you have learned to know about Music. Naturally, these tests can cover only the facts about Music, the names, terms and and signs commonly used in Music. Your individual playing of the pieces is quite another matter! That will depend upon your talent and your taste.

You can, however, compare your playing with that of other Melody Way Club members, or with that of other pianists playing Music on the same grade of difficulty. Also, I should strongly urge you to ask for criticisms and suggestions from musicians more advanced than you. If possible, you should begin to think of taking lessons from a good piano teacher.

While the Melody Way Method makes it easy and pleasant to learn to play simple pieces, you will now begin to realize how vast and wonderful is this Land of Music. How much there is to learn! Truly, "there is no royal road to learning!" You will appreciate the truth of this old proverb as you listen to great pianists at concerts, through the reproducing piano, on the photograph, or over the air, by radio!

The finished and artistic playing that you hear in these ways need not and should not discourage you. All these great ones were once beginners, just as you now are. They also, like you, at one time had the experience that "all beginnings are hard."

"All Beginnings Are Hard."

If I have helped somewhat to make your beginnings a little easier, I shall be very happy. But, after all, you must work out things for yourself. "Practice makes perfect"—but it must be the right kind of practice. Therefore, a good teacher will be the greatest help to you by showing you how to study and how to practice.

However, there are still six lessons to come before the close of your present course. If you will do your part, I can safely promise that you will accomplish far more during the next six weeks than you have so far. Isn't that encouraging?

You were promised a new piece each week. Now, if you will look over your first six lessons, you will count seven pieces. So, you see, we are one piece ahead of our schedule. Therefore, this will be a good time to perfect the pieces that we have already learned, especially the last two, "My Pony" and "Happiness."

Transposition

If you have ever had the joy of working in a garden, you will know what is meant by "transplanting." A plant is dug up by the roots and set off in another place in our garden. When we transpose a piece of Music, we shift it to another part of our keyboard, higher up or lower down into another key. This is called transposition.

There are two reasons for teaching you how to transpose. The composer chooses a given key because it seems to fit the mood of the piece he is composing. Some pieces sound better in one key than in another. Therefore, you should become familiar with all the keys.

Many people have the mistaken idea that "sharp keys," for example, are more difficult than "flat keys." This is only a form of superstition. The truth is that "nothing is difficult that is familiar." It is to make the different keys "familiar" that I am asking you to transpose. Then you need never fear pieces written in sharp or flat keys.

The second and stronger reason for learning to transpose is that it is easier to play a simple, familiar piece in a new key than it is to learn a new piece in the new key at the same time. If you are already acquainted with a certain key because you have played a familiar piece in it, then your fingers will naturally "feel at home" when you start to learn the new piece. This week, then, we shall learn more about transposition, keys, and key signatures.

Now you know why the first phrase of "Little Wooden Shoes" appears five times on this page, each time in a different key. I chose this phrase because it contains the three chords, I, IV and V, which, I told you, were so important, because they are used so frequently in all Music.

You are to try to play "Little Wooden Shoes" from beginning to end in each of the five keys used here for the first phrase. Remember that the lowest tone, Do, of the I Chord, tells you the name of the key in which the piece is written or is being played.

You will have no difficulty in transposing this or any of your other "Melody Way" pieces if you will follow the following steps:

How to Transpose

1. Name the letter name of Do in the new key.
2. Place the Key-Finder with Do on the right key.
3. Play Do Re Mi Fa So with the R. H.—then with the L. H.
4. Play the chords I-IV-V-I with the R. H.—then with the L. H.
5. Play the familiar Melody in the new key.
6. Name the chords of the piece, phrase-wise.
7. Play the chords of the piece, phrase-wise.
8. Play the two hands together.
9. Write the Melody in the new key.
10. Write the chords in the new key.

Now study the transposition of the first phrase of "Little Wooden Shoes" that I have written out for you, one key at a time. In fact, you should take a day or two for each key. You will be doing beautifully if you succeed in playing and writing "Little Wooden Shoes" in all five keys by the end of the week.

This new skill in transposing should prove so interesting that I am expecting you to try it out on your other pieces from time to time. For instance, here is a suggestion:

Transpose—
"Magic Music" to G and C Major.
"To a River" to C and D Major.
"Evening Song" to D and E Major.
"Lady Moon" to A and E Major.

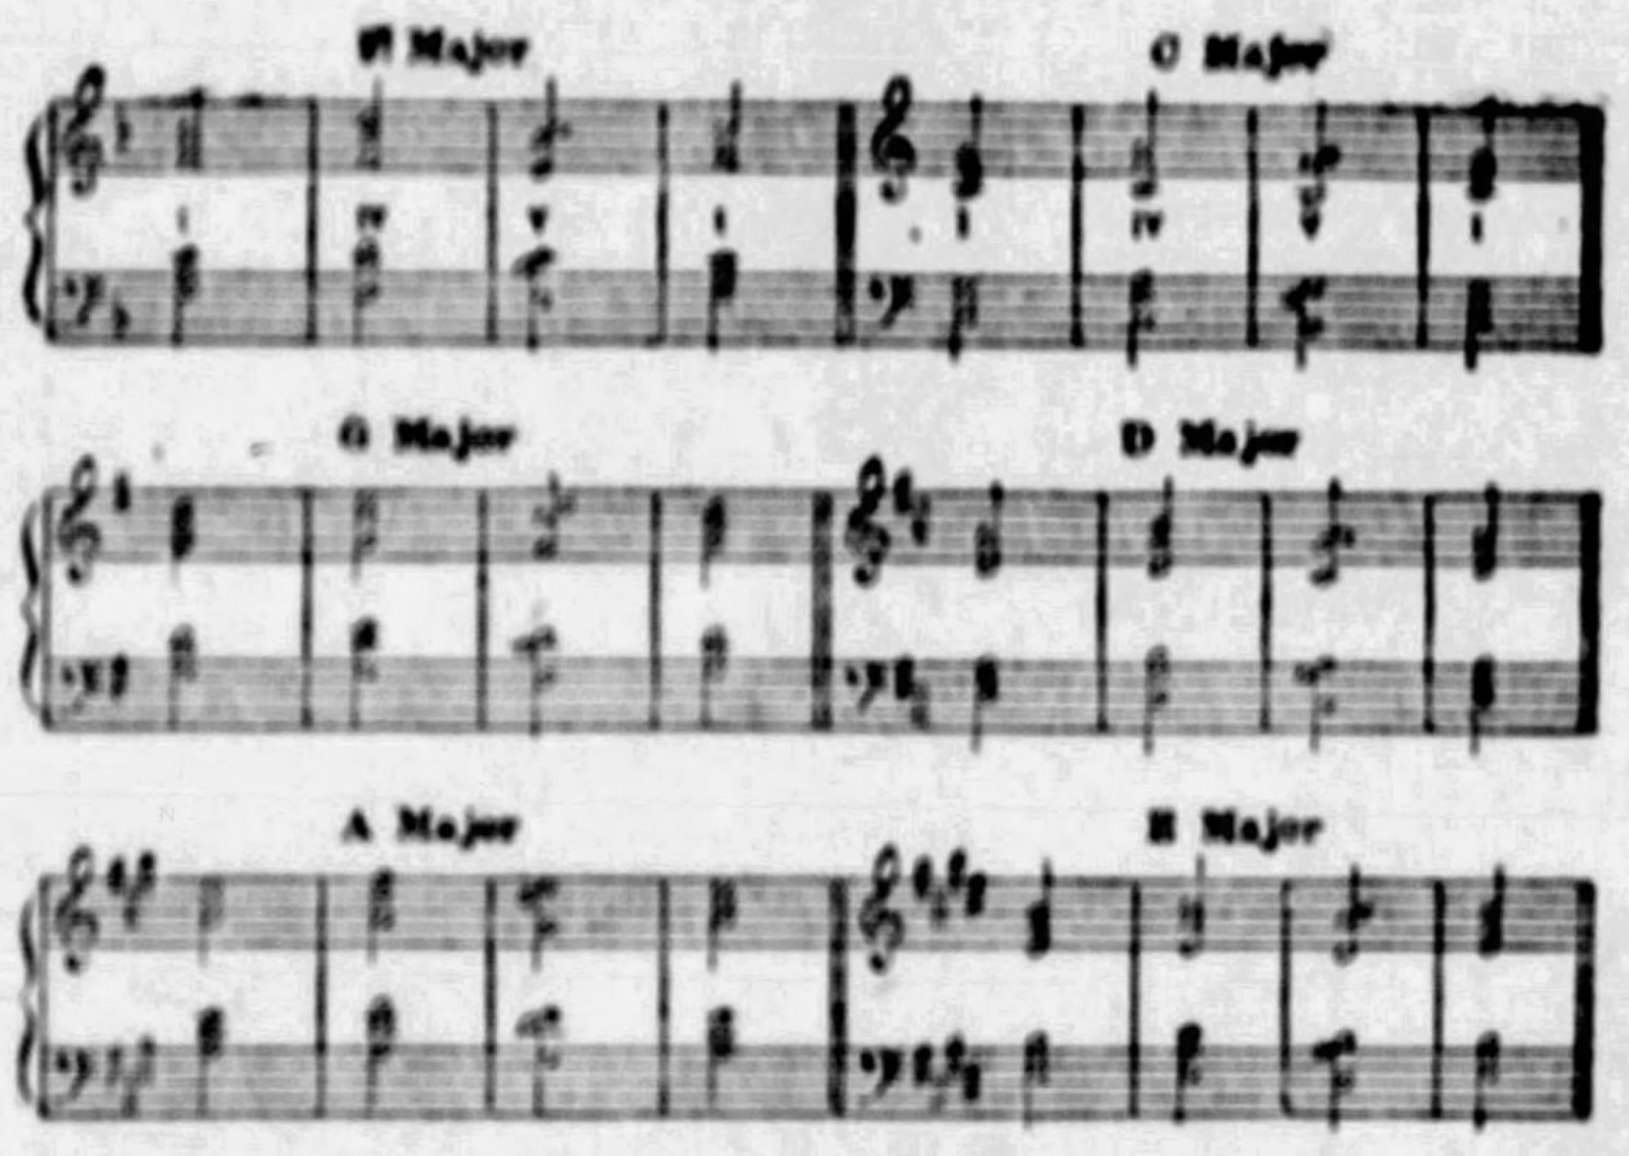
The following chord-connections will help you. Cut these out and paste each set of four chords on a separate card the size of a post-card. Better still, copy them yourself, writing each set on a separate card. The practice of copying and writing down the Music will help you enormously to read and to memorize Music.

"Learn Music by writing it," was the plan that some of the world's greatest musicians and composers followed. Richard Wagner, for example, learned to write his Music for great orchestras by copying, in his own hand, the symphonies of that other great Music Master, Ludwig van Beethoven.

Harmonic Drills

Having cut out and mounted (or copied) these chord connections, I—IV—V—I, called the "Complete Cadence," ask someone to hold up each card for three seconds. Try to take in, so to speak, with the eye at one glance, all four chords, then play them rhythmically, giving two counts to each chord. This will give you the chord foundation for transposing the above pieces in these six different keys.

Chord Connections



Key Signatures

So far, each time you started to play a new piece, you were told on which key you were to place Do, or One of the Major scale. The Key-Finder at once showed you what key to play for each tone of the scale.

You were told that the letter name of Do, or one of the scale, also names the key of the piece. When we speak of key in this sense, we mean a "family" of tones. The whole family is named after the letter names of Do, just as your whole family is named after the sur-name of your father. So we have tone families called "Key of F Major," "Key of G Major," and so on, just as we have families of Smiths and Browns.

The clef, together with the sharps and flats at the beginning of a piece, is the sign which tells the key and shows which keys are flat or which keys are sharp. This sign is called the Key Signature.

You can see that the Key Signature means a great saving of time to the composer. In the key of F, for example, every B is flat. Instead of putting the flat before every B in the piece, it is written once, at the beginning, in the Key Signature.

Name Flats and Sharps

Hereafter, you should make a practice of studying the Key Signature of each piece and naming the sharps or flats that are to be observed in that piece. By doing this, you will gradually become independent of the Key Finder.

How to Know Keys

The farthest sharp to the right is always Ti. Count up one step on the staff, as Ti Do. If there are two sharps, the right hand sharp will be C sharp, and the key (if major) will be D major.

The farthest flat to the right is always Fa. Count down, four steps on the staff, as, Fa Mi Re Do. If there are two flats, the right hand flat will be E flat and the key (if major) will be B flat major.

There are no sharps nor flats in the Key of C Major.

Your musical foundation is now fairly laid. On this foundation you can build: With this equipment you can develop your musical skill. With these keys you can unlock the doors to the treasure-house of Music. Learn to use them well! My paternal blessings on the girls and boys of the Melody Way Club!

The Most Brilliant Social Asset Is the Ability to Play the Piano

Acquire the ability to play the piano and you will never lack friends. For the greatest of all gifts will be yours—the ability to entertain, to bring pleasure, to comfort, and to inspire with music. Such a man or woman is always popular, always sought after, whether his music be that of the great classics or the foot-itching rhythm of today's jazz.

Every child deserves the privilege of a piano education. When you give this knowledge to your children, you provide them with a permanent source of attraction and lay the foundation of undying happiness.

Today's pianos are made to fit every type of room and every size of purse—grand pianos, baby grands, uprights, and player pianos with their repertoire of the world's greatest music.

Stop in at the show rooms of these piano merchants, and learn how easy and inexpensive it is to give your family this wealth of happiness and culture—a piano.

First 500 Newsies Get Show Treat Monday

A steady tramp of young feet will be heard in the Gayety Theater lobby Monday night. Five hundred newsboys who sell the Sun-Telegraph every day, will visit there as guests of the newspaper and will see "Jiggs, Maggie and Dinty," new musical comedy which will play in that theater next week.

Theater officials have reserved a big block of seats for the boys.

Several of the blind salesmen of the Sun-Tele will go along to hear the music and the jokes, and listen to the sound of the rolling pin as it lands on Jiggs. Some, having never seen the noted cartoon character on the printed sheet or the stage, have heard of George McManus' most noted laugh-maker and expect to enjoy the performance.

The remaining 1,000 Sun-Tele newsboys will be given seats for Tuesday and Wednesday night, with 500 seats reserved each night. Tickets have been printed and will be distributed to the boys today by the circulation department of the newspaper.

DRAG CREEK FOR $20,000 PAPER

Pigeon Creek in Washington county today attracted a fishing expedition of police, detectives and independent investigators bent on recovering from its muddy water a brief case said to contain $20,000 in negotiable securities.

The case, property of Jacob Newman, New York traveling man, was thrown into the creek, it is said, by one of two prisoners who are charged with having stolen Newman's car from the Tenth Street Garage. Those held in connection with the theft are Frank Hilton, 609 Marine avenue, and Richard Jones, of 134 Crawford street, both Negroes.

Pola Aids Her "Real-Estating" Prince and Will Make Debut As Apartment House Owner

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21.—The exotic Pola Negri is soon to be seen in a new role and one that is filling her with delight. She is building a new apartment house on Mariposa street, next door to the Ambassador Hotel, and planning each suite with individual attention. Ground will be broken next week for what Pola believes will be an innovation, even in Hollywood.

She has purchased old French furniture—and the entire house will be of French design and architecture. The cost of $620,000, she believes will be well spent, for Hollywood is going into the apartment business on a lavish scale.

Mrs. Tom Ince has built a most artistic apartment hotel called the Villa Carlotta on Franklin avenue and within a few months she will build another across the street.

Undoubtedly Prince Serge Mdivani, the new husband, influenced Pola to branch out as an apartment house owner. He has gone into the real estate business and Pola says in the last few months he has made more money than she has as an actress. I don't know whether Pola is being generous or not, but if he makes that amount of money, no wonder real estate promoters are so numerous in this neck of the woods. Pola and her prince are leaving for New York almost immediately for a month in the big city—a little vacation between pictures.

If Renee Adoree had an astral body that would probably be working too at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—but both Miss Adoree and M-G-M have discovered it is a physical impossibility for an actress to play in two pictures at once. She was cast for the lead in "Rose Marie" and in Ramon Novarro's next picture. The latter is nowhere near finished and won't be for sometime. So—exit Renee and enter Joan Crawford. Joan has a few assignments ahead herself. She is now finishing "West Point" with William Haines, and after that she is signed for Tim McCoy's picture, "The Texas Ranger." Edmund Goulding, who directs "Rose Marie," really discovered Joan, so he has announced his intention of waiting until she can be ready for his picture. There is a whisper that "Anna Karenini," Mr. Goulding's last picture, is a "wow," I do hope M-G-M will have a change of heart and not send Anna out labeled "Love." Shades of Tolstoy!

Speaking of "Rose Marie," the music, I am told, will figure largely in the presentation. You just couldn't think of "Rose Marie" without some of those strains of music that made it such a popular operetta. Creighton Hale, by the way, has also been signed for a part. Creighton is a versatile youth who can play a boob as convincingly as Harry Langdon. I cannot pay him a greater tribute.

Jetta Goudal isn't losing any sleep over her absence from the films. Naturally, a lady doesn't like to be accused of having a bad disposition, but still most of us have our off days now and then. Miss Goudal was soaring in the clouds yesterday over an offer made her to play the feminine lead in "Congal," the stage dramatization of Harry Hervey's book. The author himself, who came West to have his say on "The Devil Dancer," Gilda Gray's next picture, made Miss Goudal the offer. I remember her on the stage in "The Golden Goddess," a very small part, for which she received flattering notices for her work. Jetta had not then learned to be temperamental. Temperament is usually acquired only with success.

October 29 can be called De Mille week on Broadway. Seven of the De Mille operas will play along the Great White Way. I don't know whether it is a concerted drive to be followed later by other producers, or whether it just happens that these seven reached the "promised land" all at one time. The Paramount draws "The Forbidden Woman," Roxy gets "The Main Event;" Strand, "Dress Parade;" Colony, "The Angel of Broadway;" Gaiety, "The King of Kings;" Cameo, "The Wise Wife;" Hippodrome, "The Girl in the Pullman," and Broadway, "Harp in Hock." Only once before have I seen that record anywhere approached or equaled. The Cosmopolitan Pictures had six on Broadway at one time.

A bride in Hollywood these days gets enough to furnish her house, complete her trousseau and save her husband expense of all sort. Diana Kane has been one of the most feted brides of the season. Colleen Moore gave a large buffet supper and shower for Miss Kane last night. The bridegroom, George Fitzmaurice, had to content himself with coming in later and only getting a glimpse of the party, for men were not expected.

SUNDAY MIDNITE SHOW

OPERETTA LEAD CONTINUES

Lottice Howell, who has been heard elsewhere in the leading role of "My Maryland," will be with the operetta Monday night, when it opens in the Alvin, notwithstanding previous announcements to the contrary, according to J. J. Shubert, who informed John B. Reynolds, manager of the Alvin, last night by long distance telephone. Miss Howell originally was taken from the leading role of the Philadelphia company of "My Maryland" to appear with the company which comes here and then goes to Chicago. Recently she was offered a starring part in a new Broadway success under another management. Mr. Shubert went to Buffalo, where "My Maryland" now is playing, and induced her to continue as prima donna here and in Chicago.

"The Constant Nymph," a play by Margaret Kennedy and Basil Dean, based on the novel of the same name by Miss Kennedy, will open its Pittsburgh engagement Monday evening in the Nixon, where it will remain a week. This play has been seen in but two American cities—New York and Boston. Beatrix Thomson and Claude Rains are the featured players, the former appearing as Teresa Sanger (the constant nymph) and the latter as Lewis Dodd, the young master composer.

The Theater Guild, "The Silver Cord," with Laura Hope Crews in the role which she created in New York, begins a week's engagement in the Pitt Monday evening, playing the usual matinees Thursday and Saturday. Sidney Howard, the author, is the young dramatist who won the Pulitzer prize in 1925 with "They Knew What They Wanted."

Next week has been designated as "College Week" in the Penn, as the program has a collegiate atmosphere. Wednesday night will be "Duquesne Night," Thursday has been set for Pitt, Friday being "Tech Night." Each of these nights will bring forth special surprises. Marion Davies, in "The Fair Co-ed," is the feature picture and as the title discloses is a "natural" for college students.

Shirley Mason celebrated two birthdays in one day during the filming of "Sally in Our Alley," which comes to the Aldine Theater next week. One celebration was a part of the picture. The other took place at Miss Mason's home after her studio work was done. She had a real birthday cake for each occasion.

Healy and Cross, booked for the Davis next week on the Keith-Albee vaudeville program, have a wide variety of songs ranging from opera to jazz.

Jascha Gurewich, appearing with Jose and Pepita on the stage of the Grand next week, is a saxophone artist.

George Jessel, comedian, gives a Vitaphone comedy monologue and solo, entitled "A Few Minutes With George Jessel," in the Olympic next week.

"Rio" will be a dancing feature in "Step Lively Girls," next week's burlesque in the Academy.

CONCERT TO BE GIVEN BY ENGLISH SINGERS

The English Singers will open the Art Society season Friday evening, October 28, in Carnegie Music Hall. The program is to begin at 8:15 o'clock. In the sextet are Flora Mann, Nellie Carson, Lillian Berger, Norman Stone, Norman Notley and Cuthbert Kelly.

The program is made up of sixteenth and seventeenth century ballads, madrigals, motets and folk songs from that richest of English musical lore, which has a charm all its own, and is so rarely heard. Members of the Art Society feel that, by bringing these singers again, it is giving Pittsburgh lovers of music an opportunity to hear one of the most unusual programs done in a most unusual way.

Last night several thousand music lovers crowded into Syria Mosque to hear the opening concert of the present season. May Beegle chose well when she found Beniamino Gigli, Metropolitan Opera tenor, to lead the procession of stars she is about to present to Pittsburgh. Excellent singing and clownish playing are bound to get our audiences; they would have liked to keep the singer teasing them till midnight.

But Gigli is a real singer. Not since Caruso has there been a tenor with such a vibrant voice, a voice of such dramatic quality from the lowest through the highest register. His phenomenal breath control permits many beautiful phrases, but may prove this tenor's undoing if he continues to vocalize his simple songs instead of giving them direct readings. This happened in "Nina" and in the Gluck air. Gigli is always conscious of the thousand grades between piano and forte and manages his nuances without affectation. There were golden high notes, none of them offensive, because they had a purpose; they were strictly in order, musically speaking. And Gigli's diction is so rhythmic and so fluent that he might almost speak his lines and impart their musical value. Best of all, the audience might close its eyes, and this tenor can recreate for his hearers the mood and scene of an opera with voice alone.

In opera airs Gigli was at his best, and yet he was brave enough to try a Grieg romanza and sing it as well as his native songs. I should choose the "Martha" as his best offering of the evening; no one else in my recollection has struck the old-fashioned Flotow hit that Gigli has found. He was keen enough not to make his "Pagliacci" a laughing song, nor force the tragedy of his "Tosca" given as encore. There were many encores, a humorous "La Donna e Mobile," a Buzzi-Pecci love song and a serenade by Torselli.

No other singer would have had a chance on the same program with Gigli. Anne Tyson sang at great disadvantage, and, I believe, had she sung another group of songs she might have had her chance; the audience was just beginning to appreciate her talents. We should be grateful that she included a Wolff and a Schumann song. Vito Carnevalli played accompaniments and did much to aid Gigli in creating the tragic spirit of his "Tosca" and "Pagliacci."

WILKINSBURG'S SLEEP RUINED

Wilkinsburg firemen awakened the whole town this morning as five false alarms sounded at intervals of about 15 minutes shortly after 4 o'clock from widely-separated parts of the borough took them on practically every important street. A small automobile fire and two small home fires brought the total alarms of the night to eight. Firemen and police believe a gang traveling in an automobile turned in the false alarms.

DVORAK'S LARGO, FINALE IN FREE ORGAN RECITAL

The Largo and Finale from Dvorak's "New World Symphony" are included on the program for the Free Organ Recital to be given at 8:15 o'clock tonight in Carnegie Music Hall. This symphony was inspired by themes from the only American sources that can lay claim to distinctive musical originality—Negro and Indian. Dvorak was a Bohemian composer. The program opens with the Overture to "Sakuntala," by Goldmark. This concert overture first established the composer's fame many years ago.

"Sunshine Mary," Aged Newsie of Capital, Dies

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—(AP.)—"Sunshine Mary," who, for 20 years braved rain or snow or cold to sell newspapers at one of the capital's much frequented corners, is dead. At the age of 73, a downpour such as visited Washington this week is apt to prove too much. For "Sunshine Mary" it brought what the doctors called "senile pneumonia" and death.

Mrs. Margaret D. Bailey was her real name, and she was far from being the venerable waif that many thought her. Convent-bred and beautiful in her youth, she once sang in the chorus of light operas, and the tunes she hummed as she peddled her papers were but the echoes of those romantic days.

Among the ragged urchins who were her competitors it had become traditional that "Sunshine Mary" was a female creosus and "loaded wid money." But with death came the truth; her entire fortune amounted to $26.60.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Anne King Scott to Make Debut at Dance Jan. 2

Following in the footsteps of her sister, Elizabeth Lupton Scott, who came out, I believe, two seasons ago, Anne King Scott, daughter of the J. King Scotts, of Devon road, is to make her bow to society this winter. The usual coming-out tea has been omitted, and, instead, Anne will be presented at a dance to be given January 2 in the Pittsburgh Golf Club by her grandmother, Mrs. William Scott, of Devonshire street. On the distant side, Anne is a granddaughter of Mrs. Henry B. Lupton, formerly of Shadyside, who has been living at the Kenmawr for several years. The debutante is a Dobbs Ferry girl.

Ever since the Soho Community House, in Fifth avenue, was established, the board of directors has been holding annual bridge benefits to earn the money for its support, and the standing and popularity of the house is evidence that the parties are most successful. This year the benefit is to be held November 15 in the Hotel Schenley, with the officers who were elected last spring in charge. Mrs. Ralph T. Rowles is the new chairman, and with her vice chairmen, Mrs. Howard Hale McClintic and Mrs. Benjamin Page, has been putting forth every effort to make this party succeed better financially than any of the preceding ones. As one member of the board reminded me yesterday, this is the only community house available to residents of the Soho district, and with classes conducted for both white and Negro people, it is really a rallying point for all community life there. And when it is remembered that this annual tea is the only source of revenue for the house, it is small wonder that the board tries so hard to make it as profitable as possible.

Mrs. McClintic and Mrs. Page were vice chairmen of the former board, and the former corresponding secretary, Mrs. Thomas Ewing, still retains her office, but Miss Grace E. Steiner has taken Miss Mary Martha Armstrong's place as recording secretary, and Mrs. Samuel E. Hackett is treasurer instead of Miss Elizabeth Macfarlane. Others on the board are Mrs. George W. J. Bissell, Mrs. Clinton S. Bradley, Mrs. Howard N. Eavenson, Mrs. William Carothers, Mrs. Richard H. Watkins, Mrs. John J. Heard, Mrs. Alexander Murdoch, Mrs. Frank Kier and Miss Sara Frazer.

Speaking of Miss Bissell, she is planning to introduce her new daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Jackson Bissell, to her friends at a tea in her home next Tuesday afternoon. The junior Bissells are living temporarily in the Cathedral Mansions while their new home in Linden avenue is being built. They expect to be in the house early in the spring. Mrs. Bissell will be recalled as Margaret Norman Sachs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Sachs, of Hartford, Conn., before her wedding, June 18. She was a member of the Junior League there. Mrs. Bissell has made many friends in the short time she has lived in Pittsburgh, and quite a number of parties are being planned in her honor.

In St. Andrew's Episcopal Church tonight at 7:30 o'clock the marriage of Miss Amelia Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Lee, of North Negley avenue, and Carl Moser Deakin, of Detroit, will be solemnized by the Rev. J. Reginald Moodey. The bride will wear ivory transparent velvet and rose point lace, with a court train of velvet edged with chiffon. Her tulle veil will be held with a cap of rose point lace and orange blossoms, and she will carry orchids showered with lilies of the valley. Mrs. Charles McCrea White, of Philadelphia, as matron of honor, will appear in chinchin blue transparent velvet and will carry yellow and bronze chrysanthemums. Her other atendants will be Miss Gertrude Guth and Mrs. John McCormick Titzel, in shell pink velvet, and Mrs Paul C. Maher and Miss Gretchen Emmerling, in parme orchid velvet. Their flowers will be pink and orchid chrysanthemums. Harold Sleeper, of Detroit, will be best man, and the ushers will include Adam Brodhead Howard, C. Upton Shreve, Harold Jerome and Raymond A. Patton, of Detroit; Carl L. Brandt, of Birmingham, Mich.; Charles W. Simon, Jr., of Pittsburgh; Charles R. Collier, of Cleveland, and Charles Robert Lee, brother of the bride. A dinner and reception in the Hotel Schenley will follow the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Deakin will make their home in the Alden Court Manor, Detroit.

RUSSIA NEITHER UTOPIA NOR HELL, CLUB IS TOLD

"Russia is not Utopia. Russia is no longer hell," said Dr. Roswell H. Johnson in opening his talk on "Russia in Flux" before the College Club yesterday afternoon. In sketching the course of the Russian revolution, Dr. Johnson said revolutions happen easily during a war and one of the lessons the United States can learn from this bit of Russian history is that the preservation of peace is the greatest anti-revolution factor any nation can have. He spoke of the shocking waste in petty trade. People sit along the curbs with the most absurd stocks of goods, he said, and for no greater turnover than a newsboy would have. He took his audience through a Russian election and discussed marriage and moral conditions of the country. Dr. Johnson's description of the life about a railway station was especially interesting. The people have no means of telling time, so they go to the station and wait for the train, which sometimes run only two or three times a week.

Jiggs Sketches Pour in By Hundreds

Hundreds of young and old folks of Western Pennsylvania yesterday sent in original sketches of Jiggs, in the hope of winning tickets to "Jiggs, Maggie and Dinty," musical comedy playing next week at the Gayety Theater.

Some of the sketches of the notable Jiggs were interesting and novel. Monday will be the last day for the remainder to come in, as Tuesday's Sun-Telegraph will publish the final list of winners for Wednesday and Thursday night performances.

Monday's Sun-Tele will carry the names of those winning tickets to Tuesday night's show.

The chance to win tickets to the musical show, offered by the Sun-Telegraph in connection with the Gayety Theater, is based not so much on ability to draw as on cleverness in presenting Jiggs.

Just try to draw Jiggs in any pose you wish, send in your sketch to the Jiggs editor, Sun-Telegraph, and get in on the tickets.

The rules follow:

For the best and most original draw of Jiggs, an entire box of six seats will be given for Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday night, as desired.

For the next 10 best sketches, each sketcher will be given four orchestra seats.

The next 20 best sketches will be given one pair of seats and the next 25 sketchers will get one seat each.

Submit as many cartoons as you like. There is no age limit. Professionals and employes of the Sun-Tele and Gayety Theater alone are barred. But hurry in your drawing to the Jiggs editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

RESOLUTE MAY BE TOTAL LOSS

The towboat Resolute, which plunged over Dam No. 1 of the Monongahela River, Thursday, is a total loss, rivermen who visited the scene of the accident reported yesterday. The sinking of the Resolute when it was swept over the dam and the flooding of the big cofferdam at Dead Man's Island at Sewickley were the major losses caused by the rise in the rivers due to the heavy rains of the week. The cofferdam will be pumped out to enable the resumption of work early in the week.

THE DEATH ROLL

Morris Wolf.

Morris Wolf, 53, of 5886 Darlington road, died Thursday in his home. He was a native of Baltimore. Mr. Wolf was engaged in the designing and importing of women's clothing. He was a member of the Masonic order, the Independent Order of B'nai Brith and the Tree of Life Synagogue. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Susan Miller Wolf; four sons, Ralph, Irvin, David and Burton Wolf, and three daughters, Miss Beatrice, Miss Charlotte and Miss Marjorie Wolf.

Mrs. Henry L. Angloch.

Mrs. Jennie Norris Angloch 60, wife of Henry L. Angloch, superintendent of the city bureau of electricity, died Friday in her home, 736 Bellaire avenue. Mrs. Angloch was a former teacher in the Minersville school, old Thirteenth Ward. She was a member of the Brookline Boulevard United Presbyterian Church and past president of the church missionary society. Besides her husband she leaves a son, J. B. Angloch, of Kane, and three daughters, Mrs. Bruce H. Lytle, Mrs. William B. Hamilton and Miss Mary M. Angloch.

Short Skirts O. K. for Debs but Not Bare Backs

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Ned Wayburn, stage director of the Ziegfeld Follies, lost an argument to Chicago society girls and their mothers. It was all about what the girls will wear in the annual Service Club show tonight.

Ned's costumes have very much abbreviated skirts, to which the girls did not object, but when it came to appearing on the stage in clothes with no backs at all, they objected.

"They insist on some sort of a back, even if it is only ribbons," a spokesman for the girls told Ned. He refused and the girls went on strike.

So Ned sent for seamstresses, who hastily sewed ribbons in the backs of the "tuxedo costumes."

CHURCH OPENS DUAL FESTAL WEEK

Celebrating the official opening of the new church edifice and the one hundred and forty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the German Evangelical Protestant Church, Smithfield street, a festival week by the congregation will be inaugurated at the services tomorrow. In the pulpit with the pastor, Rev. Dr. Carl A. Voss, will be the Rev. Dr. Herman Obenhaus of Chicago, who will preach in German, and the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Burton of New York, the English preacher. The services will begin at 10:45 a. m., following a rally by the Sunday school.

MAYOR TO SPEAK

In the evening will be held a municipal service, at which felicitations will be offered by various city and county officials and representatives of the civic and educational interests. The speakers will be Judge A. B. Reid, County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, Mayor Charles H. Kline, President of Council Daniel Winters, William H. Stevenson, president of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania; Chancellor John B. Bowman of the University of Pittsburgh and President Marcus Aaron of the Board of Public Education. Services will be held in the church each evening during the week and next Sunday a special Reformation Day observance will close the series of special services.

The church was founded by Rev. John Henry Weber, sent over the mountains by the Synod of Reading to serve four western congregations. The first services were held in a small blockhouse at Wood and Diamond streets, and in 1787 the Penns deeded the tract of land at Smithfield street, north of Sixth avenue, where a church was built and has been held by the congregation for 140 years. A stone church was built in 1875 and this was replaced by a commercial building last year when the present church was erected on the north end of the plot.

PARKER SERIES OPENS

"The Sermon on the Mount for Today" will be the subject of a series of sermons to be begun Sunday morning by Dr. Percival H. Barker in his Point Breeze Presbyterian Church.

"How Can We Prevent Divorces?" will be the theme for the open forum at East End Christian Church Sunday night, following a sermon on the same subject by Dr. John Ray Ewer.

Health courses and first-aid classes will be resumed at 6 p. m. tomorrow in First Baptist Church, Bellefield avenue and Bayard street.

More than 100 Sunday school teachers and officers will be installed at 11 o'clock services in Emory Church when Dr. W. Wofford T. Duncan, the pastor, will preach on "The Opportunity of the Teacher Today."

Dr. D. H. S. Cranage, chairman of the faculty board of fine arts of Cambridge University, will preach in the morning at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Sewickley, on "Religion and Art." Dr. Cranage is vice president of the Royal Archaeological Institute, secretary of the Board of Extra-Mural Studies in Cambridge and served as preacher at Westminster Abby for several years.

The difference between a strong will and willfulness will be discussed by the Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton Sunday morning in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street. At night the Rev. Charles S. Poling, associate pastor, will speak on "Texts That Have Made Men Great."

"Woman as a Spiritual Force" will be discussed tomorrow night by the Rev. C. Carson Bransby, pastor of the Homewood Presbyterian Church. Preceding his sermon there will be an organ recital by Prof. A. R. Norton.

SPEAKER FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

The second of a series of sermons for young people on the subject, "The Hours I Spend With Thee—Sweetheart," will be delivered tomorrow night by the Rev. Albert G. Curry, pastor of the Denny Methodist Episcopal Church. The subject of the evening sermon will be "Fools Who Get Caught in the Same Trap Twice."

Continuing a series of sermons upon twentieth century religion, the Rev. Robert MacGowan, pastor of the Bellefield Presbyterian Church, Bellefield avenue, will discuss "The Power of Religion" tomorrow night. At the morning service he will speak on "The Cross in Human Experiences."

The first of a series of Sunday evening sermon lectures and open forums will be conducted Sunday night by the Rev. Frank Edwin Smith, associate pastor of the First Unitarian Church, Ellsworth avenue. The general subject of the six sermons will be "The Old Reformation and the New." The subject for tomorrow night's talk will be "The Causes."

The annual home convention and anniversary services of the East End Gospel Tabernacle, 400 Lincoln avenue, will open Sunday and continue for three weeks. The Rev. S. W. McGarvey, assistant district superintendent of the eastern district of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, and the Rev. W. S. Queen will be the special speakers. The Rev. W. I. McGarvey, pastor, will be in charge of the services.

Maj. Joseph D. Wise will speak tomorrow night at Volunteers' East End Mission, 4823 Penn avenue, and in the Downtown Mission, Volunteer building. Capt. Jennie Ingram will preach.

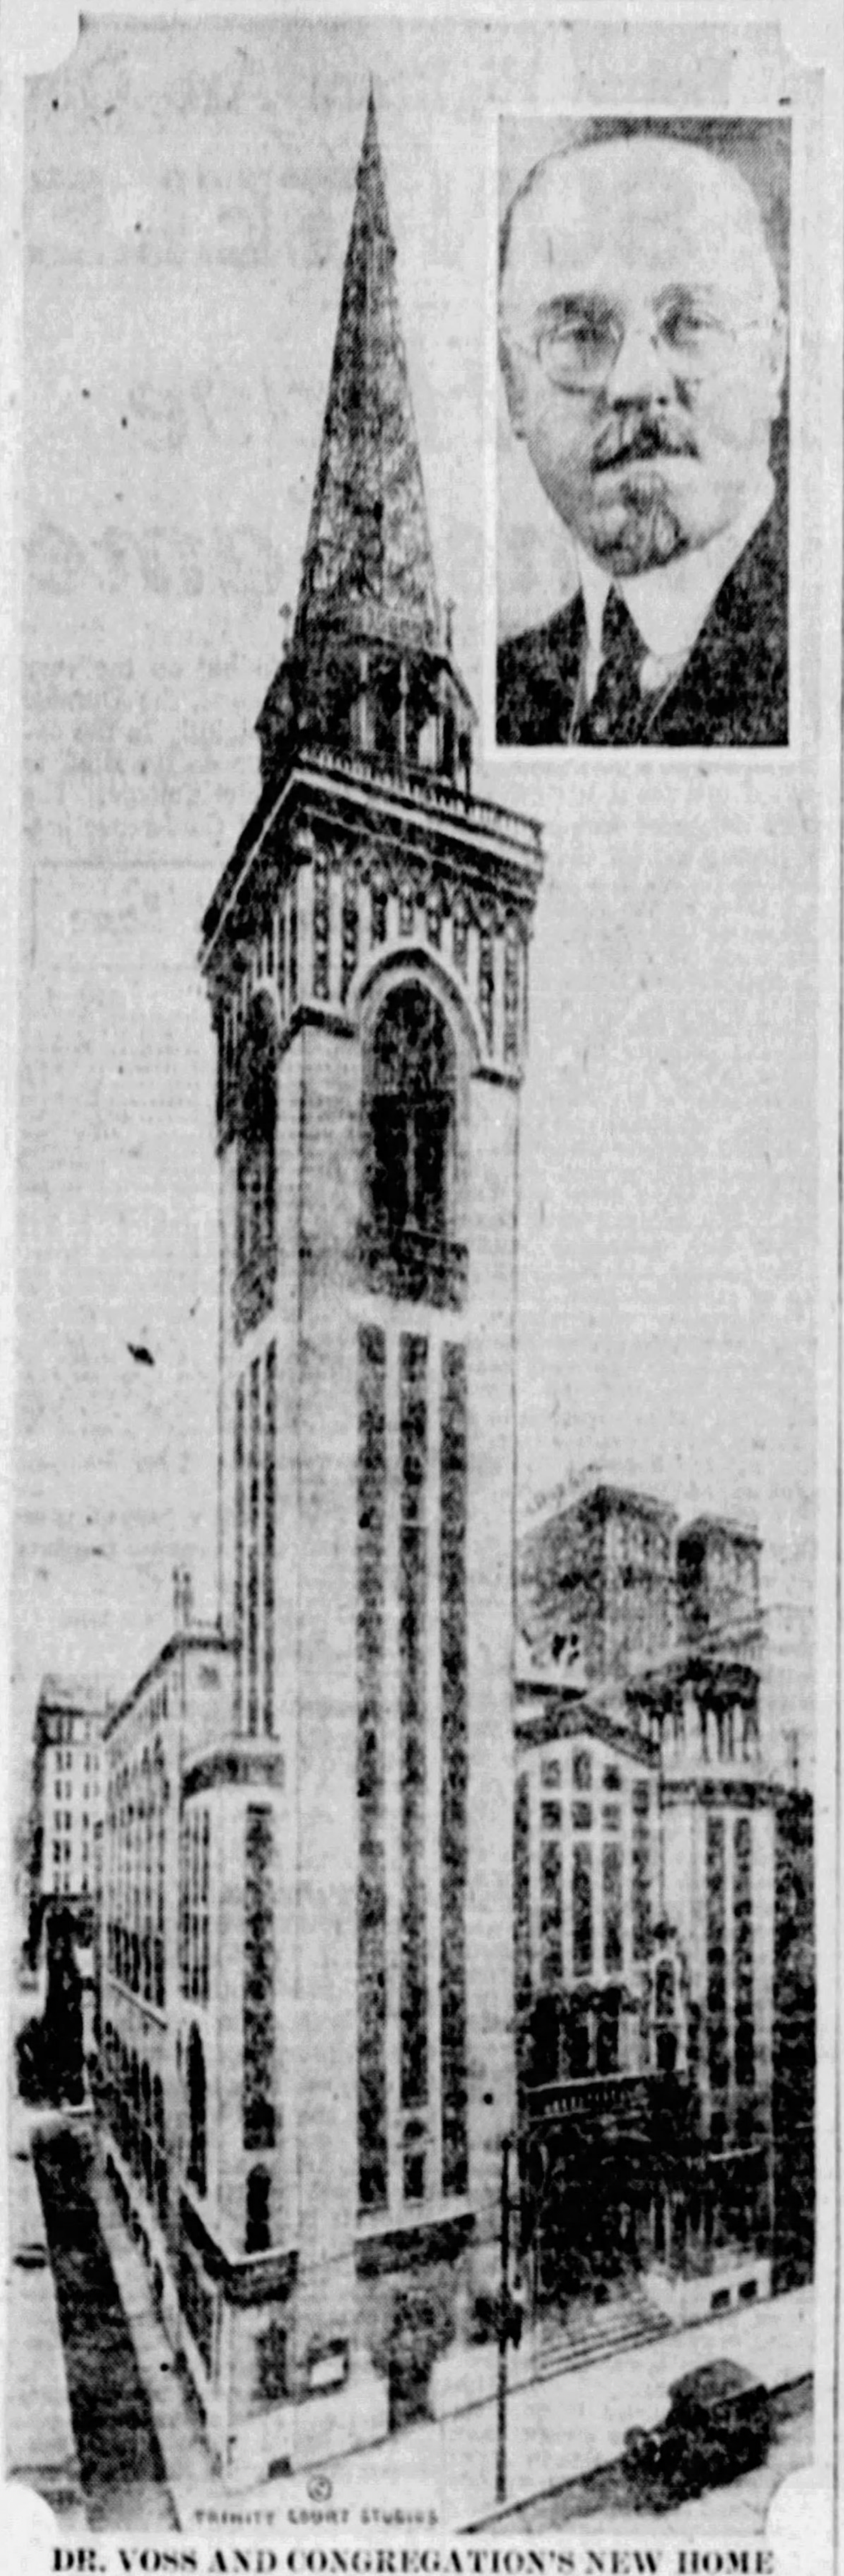
Speakers for the Sunday afternoon meetings to be held at the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. this winter were announced yesterday by Donald E. Klingensmith, chairman of the committee in charge. The meetings are held at 2:30 o'clock each Sunday afternoon in the "Y" auditorium. The first meeting is to be held November 6 and the speaker will be Dr. Robert Arthur Elwood, pastor of the Boardwalk Church, Atlantic City. Others who will speak are Col. John T. Axton, chief of chaplains of the United States Army; Dean Thomas W. Graham of Oberlin College and William Knowles Cooper, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

145 YEARS OLD



TRINITY COURT STUDIOS

DR. VOSS AND CONGREGATION'S NEW HOME

Services tomorrow will inaugurate a festival week at the German Evangelical Protestant (Congregational) Church, Smithfield street. The congregation will celebrate the one hundred and forty-fifth anniversary of its founding, and the official opening of its new building. Inset shows the Rev. Dr. C. A. Voss, pastor.

OPEN ENDEAVOR MEET MONDAY

The fall institute of the Allegheny County Christian Endeavor will be held Monday and Tuesday in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street. The institute will open each evening at 6:30 o'clock with a dinner to be followed by two conference periods. An inspirational address will close the institute each night. These will be given by the Rev. Charles S. Poling, of the Second Presbyterian Church and the Rev. S. Wilmer Beitler of the First Presbyterian Church of Butler.

Mt. Lebanon Will Make Plea for "Owl" Cars

Mt. Lebanon residents and many of those who pay late visits to the county's richest township, want "owl" cars. The Mt. Lebanon Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a meeting in the Washington School auditorium, at which bridge fans, men who have "sick friends" and the young lovelorn who would linger a few minutes after midnight are expected to get behind a common cause. At present the last street car leaves Mt. Lebanon shortly after midnight and until morning the community is isolated, except for automobile traffic.

81 and 80 to Wed; See Age no Bar to Happiness

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Henrik Peterson, 81, and Mrs. Augusta Ralstab, 80, were granted a license to marry.

"Just because we're old is no reason we shouldn't be happy," Peterson said. "We have the requisites of a happy marriage—we're good friends, we like the same things and we're old enough to know our own minds."

WILL DEDICATE NEW SCHOOL

The Rev. Dr. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, will be the speaker at the dedication of the new St. Lawrence's Catholic School, near St. Lawrence's Church, Penn and Atlantic avenues, Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock. Father Campbell, head of the parochial schools, will be there and will supply information.

DELEGATES TO ATTEND PALESTINE FUND SESSION

A score of Pittsburghers will be delegates to a national conference in Cleveland Saturday, October 29, when final plans for the nation-wide campaign of the United Palestine Appeal will be discussed. Pittsburgh will take an active part in the national drive and will conduct a two weeks' campaign here beginning November 13. DAMON RUNYON SAYS

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty dropped in to see me the other day. Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty is so called to distinguish him from all the other Doughertys, of which there are many. Any Dougherty you chance to encounter who has five digits is not Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty.

DAMON RUNYON.

Boy and man, Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty has been pursuing the manly art of smacking snoots for nigh onto 40 years, during which time he has seen many a thing come off. He has managed 15 champions of different sizes and shapes, including Al McCoy, the former middleweight champion.

Also Mr. Three-Fingered Jack directed the pugilistic destinies, as we say, of Joe Bernstein, the Ghetto champion, New York Jack O'Brien, Matty Mathews, and Charley Goodman, a good little bantam in his day, who is still associated with his old manager.

Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty wore a hard hat when he appeared before me, and there seemed to be something on his head. He glared at me for several minutes before he spoke. Then he said, rather threateningly:

"Hello!"

"Hello," I replied.

"Now then," said Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty, "117 years ago, come next grass, there appeared upon the horizon of fistic events, the first legitimate black menace known to pugilism. His name was Thomas Molyneaux. There have been many other black menaces since that time, some of whom have had larger appetites than others."

HE paused a moment, and then demanded:

"Am I right or wrong?"

"Proceed," I said, non-committally.

"Well, then, after Molyneaux we had Peter Jackson," continued Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty. "And after Jackson we had John Arthur Johnson, and after Johnson we had Harry Wills. Am I right or wrong?"

"Proceed," I said.

"After Wills we have—who?" he asked.

"George Godfrey," I suggested.

"I knew you was going to say that," said Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty, in an injured tone. "I knew you was going to say George Godfrey. You look to me like a man who would say George Godfrey. But George Godfrey is not the only current black menace. I desire to place in nomination for the office, a man who——"

"NAME him!" I said.

"Jake Warren!" announced Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty, triumphantly. "My Jake Warren! There's a black menace for you! Especially black. Fifty-four combats, and never lost a decision, nor changed color! What do you think of that?"

"It sounds reasonable," I said.

"Well," said Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty, somewhat mollified, "I'm glad to hear you say that. I wish to state that I have challenged George Godfrey for the black menaceship of the United States, and Dick Donald, the Los Angeles promoter, may put it on out there."

"I JUDGE that you Doughertys have the black menaceship pretty well sewed up," I commented.

"The guy that manages Godfrey is no relation to me," whispered Mr. Three-Fingered Jack. "I hear he's going around claiming something, but there's nothing to it. I have had a speaking acquaintance with him for about 50 years, but that's all.

"My Jake Warren is a much better black menace than Godfrey, anyway," he went on. "He is a faster black, to begin with, and is much more menacing. My Jake is just the man for the job. He's the nearest thing to Thomas Molyneaux I ever saw."

"Oh, you remember Molyneaux, do you?" I asked, startled. "I didn't think you were that old."

"I mean Johnson," replied Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty, with dignity. "The only man in this country who remembers Thomas Molyneaux is Mr. James J. Johnston. He seconded Tom. Well, I wish you good day."

Thereupon Mr. Three-Fingered Jack Dougherty took his departure, leaving me cogitating upon his remarks about Jake Warren, challenger of George Godfrey, for the black menaceship.

As a matter of fact, Jake is a pretty good fighter, at that. He is little more than a light-heavyweight, but he has yet to attain his full growth. He is a clever bird, and very fast, and I would not be at all surprised to see him causing all the big boys plenty of trouble in a year or so

WILKINSBURG BATTLES GREENSBURG HIGH TODAY

Arrangements are being carried forward for a record crowd at Graham Field, Wilkinsburg, today, when Coach Carroll's Holy City gridders tackle the powerful Greensburg outfit. As neither team has been defeated, and as both are strong championship contenders, the game will be the gridiron classic of this district, excepting the city title game between Pitt and Tech.

Both the Wilkinsburg and Greensburg squads are in perfect condition for the game. Wilkinsburg was hurt slightly when one of the first string backs became ineligible through low grades, but another player is being groomed to take his place by Saturday afternoon. The teams' chances seem to be about evenly divided.

Long Heave Wins Game

By JESS CARVER.

WITH their backs to the wall, and standing on the very threshold of a sad and disappointing defeat, the Durable Dukes of Duquesne University rallied mightily in the dying moments of a fine game yesterday afternoon on the Bluff to eke out a one point margin of victory over Thiel College. The score of the game was 8-7, and it was the third Conference battle of the season for the Dukes.

Taking to the air in a last valiant effort to stave off the seemingly certain 7-2 defeat that was staring them on the face, the Dukes opened up with a well screened forward passing attack in the last two minutes of play, completing five passes in succession and carrying the ball from their own 37-yard line over the goal, safe in the arms of the doughty Gangy Benedict. Benedict and Quarterback Johnny Murphy alternated in hurling the pigskin to each other, as the Dukes marched down the field, through a disorganized Thiel defensive that was staggering blindly, with the guiding and steadying influence of the great Stan Berkman gone. Berkman, who played a whale of a mechanical game throughout the afternoon, had been taken out of the contest by Coach Holleran with but two minutes to go. The Dukes took advantage of his absence and the laxity of the Thiel ends and scored their touchdown and won the game.

BERKMAN STARS

Thiel, with Berkman, Schillings and Mitchell alternatly cutting off tackle and running the ends, and having a slight edge in the punting, scored in an exciting third period, also through the air. Berkman heaved a 15 yard pass to Schillings and the lithe and light Lutheran back squirmed out of the arms of one tackler and out ran the Duke safety man to score.

The Lutherans didn't deserve the ball game. Even Coach Holleran admitted that. They worked the ball to the five inch line in the first period after exchange of kicks and a costly Duke fumble. But the Duke defense was impregnable, at least to the type of plays that Berkman called for, straight line smashes, that failed to gain an inch. Duquesne took the ball on downs and Donnelli punted out of danger.

The game resolved itself into a kicking duel after that until the middle of the second period, when a punt took a crazy hop past Berkman and rolled dead on the three yard line. Standing behind his own goal line, Berkman called for a punt, but the pass from center was bad and the ball sailed over Berkman's head, being downed for a safety and two points for Duquesne.

The teams continued to punt for the most part, on the second down in the third period, though Thiel gained much ground on Berkman's fine passes and end running. Finally after returning a Duke punt 25 yards, in a fine dash, to the 30-yard line on the second play, Berky hurled a pass to Schillings who raced across the goal.

MISSES FIELD GOAL

In the fourth period, Berkman made a glorious attempt to sew up the game when he tried a drop kick from the 32 yard line. The boot had the distance and the height, but just barely passed outside the uprights. It was a tough break for old Monaca Stanley.

Berkman and Schilling were the stars of the game among the backs, while Packard, Thiel guard, was easily the best bet on the Thiel line. He broke up play after play and seemed to be in every tackle.

Thiel completed 11 out of 21 passes, Duquesne 6 out of 15. The Dukes intercepted two Lutheran heaves, while Thiel grabbed five Duke tosses. The first downs were 8 to 7 in favor of Duquesne.

Joie Ray Not Fast Enough to Beat This One

GARY, Ind., Oct. 22.—Joie Ray, former champion mile runner and Olympic games star, was arrested here yesterday charged with wife abandonment. Because he refused to waive extradition, he was booked for a hearing in court tomorrow morning. Ray is employed here.

Mrs. Myrtle Ray, mother of their two children, who recently filed suit for separate maintenance, obtained the warrant in Chicago.

M'LEOD AND SPENCER LEAD IN GOLF PLAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—(AP.)—Four shots in front of their nearest competitors, Fred McLeod of Washington, former national open champion, and Glenn Spencer of Baltimore, settled down today to the final 36 holes of the Middle Atlantic open championship.

McLeod and Spencer were tied for the lead at 146, four shots in front of Tommy Armour, the national open champion, who with 150 was in a triple tie for third place.

Eight shots behind the leaders was Leo Diegel of Fenimore, N. Y., the defending titleholder, at 154. Poor putting cost both Armour and Diegel a chance to be with the leaders yesterday, Armour missing no less than eight holeable putts, while Diegel had five three putt greens.

NEW YORK FROSH LOSE TO BELLEFONTE

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—New York University's crack freshman football team went down to defeat for the first time this year when it dropped a gruelling, brilliantly contested decision to Bellefonte Academy by a 7-0 count at Ohio field yesterday. Bellefonte, national prep school champions for two years, defeated the Violet Cubs in 1925 and 1926.

The margin of Bellefonte superiority was established after the elevens had fought to a deadlock for almost two quarters. Susce shot a beautiful 21-yard pass to P. Smith who raced 22 yards to a touchdown. Temple kicked for the extra point.

SHOTS and PASSES

—by Julius Levin

HILL TOP Y. M. C. A. will have another crack amateur team on the floor this winter, according to Bill Smiley, recently appointed manager of the Hill Toppers.

Three former Wash.-Jeff. stars, Herbert, Arthur and John Slater, all experienced basketball players, have joined the Hill Top squad and are expected to win regular berths on the varsity team. Others out for the team are Brown, one of the best centers engaged in amateur basketball hereabouts; McKay, Wallace, Graham and Art Griffith.

Manager Smiley has opened negotiations with some of the leading college quintets in this vicinity for preseason games on the Hill Top floor.

THE Lancer Club, a member of the Greater Pittsburgh League, is making preparations for the basketball season and will be out this year to better its fine record of last winter.

Manager Stanley R. Koppers plans to open the season at home on Thursday, November 10, with a strong first-class team as the attraction. As in past years, the Lancers will play their home games at Falcon Hall.

OFFICIALS of the West Penn League, one of the best amateur loops ever organized hereabouts, are to be congratulated on their selection of Dr. L. G. Beinhauer as a member of the arbitration board. Dr. Beinhauer has been a basketball enthusiast for a number of years and is well qualified to act on any disputes that may arise during the West Penn League season.

Dr. Beinhauer last year was president of the Allegheny County League, but was forced to resign when his collaborators interferred with his policy of conducting the league affairs.

ACCORDING to reports prevalent in local basketball circles, the Pittsburgh Morrys will wear the colors of the McKeesport Cyclers in the Allegheny County League under the management of George Ramsay, prominent Tube City basketball center.

Should the Morrys enroll in this loop, they are certain to make a runaway race of the Allegheny County League for there are very few teams in this section of the state that can display the brand of basketball that has made the Morrys one of the best professional teams operating hereabouts.

Neither the Lafayettes nor the Rauhs, the class of the County League last season, compare with the Morrys.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Boston—Sid Barbarian defeated Mickey Sears, 10 rounds.

At Newark, N. J.—Bobby Garcia knocked out Al Delmont, 1 round; Floyd Hybert defeated Jean Menzap, 10 rounds.

At San Francisco—Billy Adams defeated Paul DeHate, 10 rounds.

At Minneapolis—Ernie Peters defeated Batt Gorman, 10 rounds; Howard Mayberry defeated Ollie Bartlett, 10 rounds.

At Syracuse—Oak Till defeated Jack Malone, 10 rounds.

At Denver—Jack Kane defeated Ted Blatt, 10 rounds; One-Step Watson defeated Peewee Johnson, 10 rounds.

At Tampa, Fla.—Tommy White knocked out Ted Smith, 8 rounds; Tony Leto defeated Carl Cavelli, 8 rounds.

At Erie, Pa.—Billy Leonard defeated Willie Lavin, 10 rounds; JJimmy Reed knocked out Duncan McTavish, 6 rounds.

At Worcester, Mass.—Pete Zivic knocked out Tony Carney, 9 rounds.

At St. Joseph, Mo.—Leo Wax and Teddy Gartin drew, 10 rounds; Toby Smith defeated Chuck Fulmer, 8 rounds; Everett Bird knocked out Joe Younger, 3 rounds.

SHADY SIDE LEADS WESTERN RESERVE, 7-0

Shady Side Academy was leading Western Reserve Academy at Hudson, O., 7 to 0, at the end of the first half of their game this morning on the Aspinwall School's gridiron. Shady Side scored in the second quarter.

M'KEES ROCKS TOPS CARNEGIE

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

McKees Rocks High's football eleven downed Carnegie High yesterday afternoon in a 24-7 game at Carnegie, running roughshod over the home team defense in the first two periods. Pennovitch was the outstanding star of the game, scoring a pair of touchdowns.

While McKees Rocks was trimming Carnegie, Dormont High upset the dope by taking Crafton into camp by a 13-0 score, pushing over touchdowns in the second and fourth periods. Geary raced 25 yards through a broken field to score the final marker.

Bellevue High showed real comeback spirit when its football team defeated Sewickley High, 6 to 6, converting a blocked punt into a touchdown in the final period.

Munhall was unable to hold Clairton after the first period and lost 19-0. Laisch turned in two fine runs to score as many touchdowns for the victors.

Elizabeth High continued its winning streak by downing Arnold Prep, 44 to 7, in a well-played and hard-fought battle at Arnold's field. Millvale battled Springdale to a scoreless tie in a strenuously contested battle.

In other games Homestead downed Glassport, 29-0; Edgewood beat Rankin, 33-7; Duquesne walloped Swissvale, 19-0; Verona swamped Sharpsburg, 24-0; St. John's bested St. Mary's, 12-0; Trinity tramped on Burgettstown, 13-0; East Washington defeated Claysville, 33-0; McDonald whipped Cecil, 20-0; East Pittsburgh and Trafford played a scoreless tie; Mars won over Evans City, 19-6; Meadville set back Polish Academy, 13-0; Rimmersburg nosed out Kittanning, 7-0; Ellsworth and East Pike played a scoreless tie; Clairton beat Munhall, 19-0, and East Bethlehem battled Georges Township to a 31-12 victory.

FEATURE RACE AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The $15,000 American National handicap is the feature at Arlington park today. Nineteen horses are entered, the cream of the handicap brigade. The distance is a mile and an eighth.

Perhaps Earl Sande master jockey, will be the feature of the day. This peerless pilot is here from New York to ride Osmand, remembered as the horse that finished second to Whiskery in the Kentucky Derby of this year.

The colt is regarded as the best 3-year-old in America at a mile, but—as regards a mile and eighth, it is up to the skillful Sande to nurse the Widener colt through the additional eighth if he is to be winner.

The Three D stable entry of Handy Mandy, Latonia Derby winner, Mix Up is given the honor. Osmand is tabbed to be second and the good Harass may be third.

MOVIES SHOW UMPIRE WRONG, SCORE CHANGED

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 22.—(UP.)—An umpire's decision on a questionable play which resulted in victory for the Casenovia football team over Oxford was reversed here when motion pictures disclosed the official was wrong.

The umpire ruled that a play which gave Oxford a touchdown had been out of bounds and that the score did not count. The decision gave Casnovia the game, 7-0. The movies showed the play legal and the score now goes into the record books as 7-7.

A letter awaits James (Red) Mason at this office.

Gibby May Smash Record

GIBBY WELCH, captain and star halfback of the Pitt football team, stands an excellent chance of bettering his 1926 ground-gaining record, the best to be turned in by any back in the country, this year. In 1926 he gained 1,190 yards in the eight games he played. So far this season, in three games, he has gained 410 yards.

TUNNEY DENIES HE'S TO WED

POLAND SPRING, Me., Oct. 22—(AP.)—Gene Tunney, who expects to be champion five years more, is married in just one way—to his profession. If there are any girls in the Pert Fowler, Maine woodsman and pion insists he doesn't know it.

That's what he said when pressed for confirmation of the latest of three reported engagements since he beat Jack Dempsey out in Soldier Field, Chicago. He did not elaborate on his five-year tenure of his crown, but said considerable in denial of matrimonial inteations.

Gene was returning from a two weeks' vacation with his old friend, Pert Fowler, Maine woodsman and guide, when apprised of the fact that rumors had gained currency that he was to wed Miss Parmelia Pryor, Greenwich (Conn.) girl and sister of Samuel F. Pryor, Jr., a friend.

"Any man who marries while he is champion makes a big mistake," said Gene.

"I am engaged to no one. The girl in question is the sister of one of my dearest friends. Shortly after the last fight they had me engaged to a girl in California, then to one in Illinois.

"Now it is a Connecticut young lady. I don't think it is fair to the girls. It must be embarrassing.

"I don't contemplate marrying while in the boxing profession. I hope next time they pick out one, they will be generous enough to notify me. I should like to be in on it."

Samuel F. Pryor, Jr., is a former Pittsburgher, who has returned to Greenwich, Conn., to make his home. A little more than a year ago he married Miss Mary Taylor Allderdice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Allderdice, of this city.

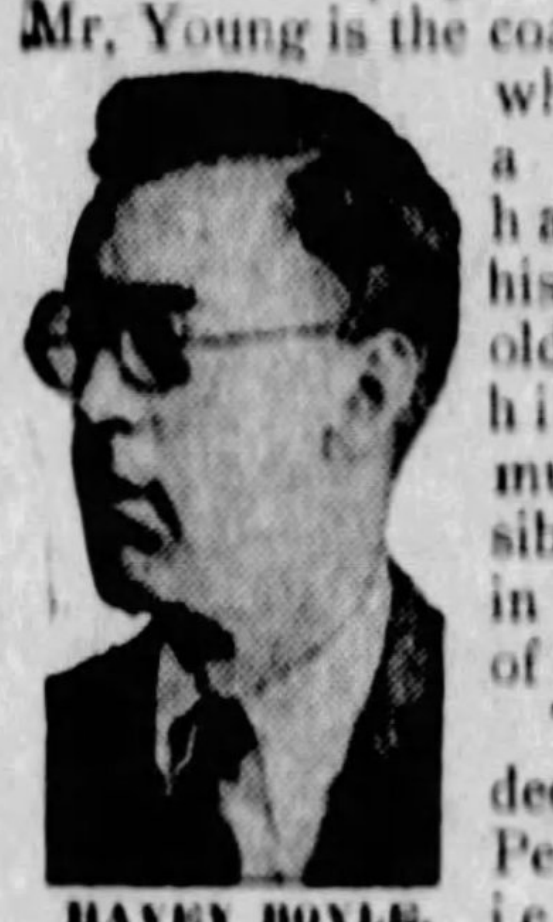
Chicago Ready for Penn

THROUGH the SPORT LENS

by HAVEY BOYLE



HAVEY BOYLE.

CHICAGO, meeting Penn today at Chicago, is interested in seeing Mr. Young's hidden ball play working out. Mr. Young is the coach at Penn, who while not a discoverer, has groomed his team in the old trick of hiding, as much as possible, the ball in the hands of the carrier. To help the deception the Penn players' jerseys are colored yellow at the elbows which helps the impression that each and every man in the line-up is carrying the ball.

Mr. Warner, the greatest creative genius the game of football ever has seen, once had footballs painted on the players' jerseys.

The Penn-Chicago game will attract plenty of attention in the West, of course, but in the East, owing to Penn's jarring defeat at the hands of State, the game will be looked upon ever so casually.

It will be hailed as a test of Eastern football against Western football, but since both teams involved lost a game this early in the season it cannot be construed as a game having any great bearing on what is best this year in the East and West.

PITTSBURGHERS, having no connection with either Pitt or Carnegie Tech, are proud of the football flashed by both institutions. Panther partisans are set for a comparatively easy victory over the Tartans. Followers of the Techites are looking for at least a low score to give them a moral victory if nothing else.

Tech has lost too many good men from last year's superb team, which beat Pitt easily, to own a chance against the experienced Panthers who may be on the road to a championship, but even the loss of five regulars will not prevent Tech from straining a heart-string or two in one gallant stand against the admittedly superior Panthers.

Fans who attend without partisan feeling are in for a great treat. No matter which side wins, the game will produce splendid football.

FOLLOWING the game yesterday here between Thiel and the Dukes, a facetious observer suggests that the boys from Greenville might save a little time by moving their practice field to Pittsburgh. Having come here no less than three times so far to play Pitt, Carnegie, and the Dukes, the Thiel boys are frequent visitors. And they are quite welcome.

The coach of the Thiel team is Dr. Thomas Holleran, who besides being an able young coach, will be remembered as one of the most colorful quarterbacks in Pitt history. Thomas was unfortunate in the matter of broken bones, torn ligaments, and such matters, but when he was in there he ran an interference that carried the power of the Broadway Limited, and he ran a team with high intelligence.

AT THE moment of galloping to press there persisted the story that Pudgy Richard Booth, Pitt fullback, would not be able to play against the Tartans, and while anyone of Dick's ability must always be missed, the Panthers are fortunate in having a gentleman named Mr. Pug Parkinson to thrust into the breach. Mr. Parkinson is not exactly a gentle zephyr when he hits a line.

STYLES in football discipline change. Just the other day an Eastern football man bewailed the fact that where some 20 years ago the hardy gridiron players celebrated a victory with much hard liquor, the son of the complainant was recently tossed off a squad for drinking beer. The coach who tossed the boy possibly lacked imagination. Anyone capable of getting good beer now ought to make a dandy quarterback of rare resourcefulness and keen intelligence.

ONE story that would have been worth while when announcement was made that Pitt is going to play Notre Dame in 1929 would have told the reactions of Coach Jock Sutherland of the Panthers. The tall Scotsman probably just grunted and wondered what all the cheering was about.

OHIO STATE has a difficult task on today. The problem at hand is to stop Mr. Benny Oosterbaan, captain of the Michigan team, from catching forward passes.

A marked man as a catcher of passes, Mr. Oosterbaan has won the acclaim of the Middle West as a genius in this difficult department of football.

In the game last Saturday between Michigan and Wisconsin, a veteran Wisconsin end, was ordered to do nothing but cover Capt. Oosterbaan. He did this pretty well, but even under such vigilance Oosterbaan made 38 yards on one pass. For the rest of the day, however, he was completely stopped.

JUST about 80,000 fans will turn out to see Michigan and Ohio State this afternoon. This tremendous total at one game, along with the thousands who will attend many other games, causes one to speculate on whether football in a shorter season, playing only one day a week, outdraws the national pastime, baseball.

Here is a chance for a figure hound to get busy. The temptation here to figure it out is not strong at all, because after we get beyond a single column of figures the most amazing results begin to pop up.

We defy any one in the world to get more startling results from such a simple matter as long division.

VIOLET, BIG TEN FOES IN 1929

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

THE University of Pittsburgh's announcement of a renewal of football relations with Notre Dame in 1929 having opened the way for a discussion of football schedules, it is learned that Carnegie Tech is not lagging in the matter of adding new and important attractions to future gridiron programs for the fans of this district.

As a matter of fact, Manager Buddy Overend and the other athletic officials at Carnegie Tech are keeping abreast of the foremost in working for "bigger and better football," and will have a few surprises of their own to announce in due time.

THESE will be very pleasing surprises, too, from all that can be learned.

The Carnegie Tech management, though working very quietly, has made such remarkable progress in its efforts toward landing new big attractions for its schedules in future years, that even at this early date it has a card almost completed for two seasons hence that will make 1929 possibly the "biggest" season to which the grid enthusiasts of Western Pennsylvania were ever treated.

Manager Overend is making no announcements on the subject, but it is learned from an authoritative source that New York University, which, under the coaching of Chick Meehan, formerly of Syracuse University, has advanced to the front football ranks in the East, has been booked to meet the Skibos in Pittsburgh in 1929.

FURTHERMORE, at least one of the Western Conference teams will be met by the Tartan. It is understood that two of the Western Conference colleges have expressed a willingness to give Carnegie Tech a date in 1929, and that one or both of these "Big Ten" teams will be on the Skibo schedule for that season.

As Notre Dame also is to come to Pittsburgh for a game with the Plaid that year, it will be seen that 1929 will be an outstanding season in football here and that Carnegie Tech will face one of the hardest and most attractive schedules ever tackled by any team.

SOME baseball players are continually getting the lucky break of being traded from one team to another just in time to become a member of a pennant winner and to get a share of the world series money.

Consider Dutch Ruether for example. Chicago sold him to Cincinnati in time to enable him to figure in the world series in 1919. Later Cincinnati traded him to Brooklyn for Rube Marquard, and in December, 1924, Brooklyn sold him to Washington. That put Dutch in line for a share of the world series coin in 1925.

On August 28, 1926, Washington released Ruether on waivers to the Yanks. Dutch's luck continued to follow him, and he was a member of a pennant winner and a world series participant while with the Yankees in both 1926 and 1927.

GETTING four world series cuts with three different clubs, through being released from one club to another, would seem to indicate that the player in question was standing in particularly well with Dame Fortune.

At least, it furnishes a striking contrast to the way things have broken for some other players.

The case of Pitcher Art Nehf is a notable one. When the once star pitcher was given his unconditional release by Cincinnati during the 1927 season, Nehf, as a 10-year man, was free to sign where he pleased. He received offers from both the Pittsburgh and Chicago clubs of the National League, and proceeded to view the matter from a business standpoint.

There was not a great difference between the two salary offers, but Nehf thought he saw a chance to get a slice of the world series spoils and proceeded to weigh in his mind the comparative pennant chances of the Pirates and Cubs.

THE Bruins were in first place at the time and going at a fast clip, whereas the Bucs appeared to be slipping, so Nehf figured that the Cubs would win the pennant and that he would have a better chance to get the extra money by signing with Chicago. Accordingly, Art cast his lot with the Bruins, with results that probably gave the left-hander a headache, when the Pirates copped the flag.

Thus, where one pitcher got into four world series through being shifted to various clubs without having any say in the matter as to where he would go, another was free to pick his own spot and missed.

LETTERS have been received from several Pitt men concurring in the opinion that in Joe Donchess, the Youngstown (O.) boy from Wyoming Seminary, the Panthers have a coming star who is the best the local university has boasted since the days of Pat Herron.

And a comparison with Herron is about the highest tribute that can be paid to an end at Pitt, for no local fan needs to be reminded that Pat, who is now coach at Washington and Lee in Lexington, Va., was a real star in a Panther uniform from 1913 to 1916.

The one-year residence rule was not in force then, so that Herron was allowed to play four years.

PAT'S work during that period was so brilliant that the general opinion was he had not been given his just dues when the late Walter Camp placed him on only the second All-American team for 1916, along with Miller of Pennsylvania, while the end positions on Camp's first team were awarded to Baston of Minnesota and Mosely of Yale.

In being compared with Herron in his first year on the varsity, Donchess is making a great start toward gridiron stardom.

STATE OPPOSES SYRACUSE

SYRACUSE, Oct. 22.—Syracuse and Penn State will meet this afternoon at Archbold Stadium in one of the outstanding grid attractions of the East. State, boasting of its first victory over Bucknell since 1896 and its more sensational defeat of Penn last week, is a slight favorite to win.

Followers of the Orange base their hopes on the strong showing of Coach Lew Andreas' green team in its game with the high scoring Georgetown University eleven last week. Syracuse won, 19-6, mainly through a dazzling assortment of passes which completely baffled the visitors. A crowd of 25,000 fans will witness today's game, it is expected. The probable lineup:

Syracuse.		Penn State.
Ramond	L.E.	Dolph
Van Ness	L.T.	Krall
Brophy	L.G.	Hastings
Wittman	C.	Mahoney
Newman	R.G.	Ricker

LOCAL MAN NAMED IN HORNSBY SUIT

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 22.—(UP.)—Rogers Hornsby, captain of the New York Giants and former manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, is scheduled to stand trial here October 31 for collection of $92,000 horse race betting debts allegedly contracted during a two-year mutual agreement with Frank L. Moore, Newport, Ky., betting commissioner.

Depositions filed in the case quote Moore as saying Hornsby frequently placed bets as high as $1,000 daily during the pennant season of 1926 and that after their mutual luck failed Moore was forced to borrow $120,000 to pay off his and Hornsby's debts. The ball player's position in the case is that Moore's claims are inadmissable in law as they are gambling in nature.

Among the men with whom bets were placed, according to Moore's deposition, was Max Freiberg of Pittsburgh.

BOTH ELEVENS CRIPPLED FOR FEATURE GAME

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Lou Young and his Pennsylvanians with their hidden ball tucked under their arms, arrived in Chicago yesterday for the express purpose of winning a football game today from Father Amos Alonzo Stagg's charges at the University of Chicago.

They checked their luggage and their hidden football at the Hotel Windermere and proceeded to the Midway, where they practiced on Stagg Field with a regulation football.

There wasn't a Maroon jersey in sight when they took the field. That was because Lou and Amos have an agreement between themselves that there would be no pre-game scouting of each other's tactics.

That means that the players on the field will have to do their own thinking. It means that Father Amos' charges will have to watch for that hidden ball. And Lou Young's men, who practice the collegiate art of smashing lines will have to do their own solving of what the Chicago boys do when they are on the offensive. Really, it is all quite something new in football.

Father Amos isn't just exactly sure that his squadron of footballers is four touchdowns better than they were last year, which they will have to be if they beat dear old Penn.

But Chicago, like Pennsylvania, goes into this scrap today with a couple or three men on crutches. But that is nothing. One of the greatest games George Gipp ever played was with an injury.

The probable lineups when the ball is booted will be for Pennsylvania—F. Scull and Lenzner, ends; Hake and Smith, tackles; Menk and McGinnis, guards; Olexy, center; Murphy and Hrill, halfbacks; Shober, quarter and Wascolonis, fullback.

For Chicago—Spence and Priess, ends; Weislow and Lewis, tackles; Greenebaum and Wolff, guards; Capt. Ken Rouse, center; Anderson and Mendenhall, halfbacks; McDonough, quarter, and Levers, fullback.

Blum, regular Maroon quarter, will be out of the game because of injuries, but the strong punting of McDonough is more than expected to make up for the deficiency.

Paul Scull, raging half for the Pennsylvanians, probably will not get into the game because of injuries, but Chicago never has feared him as much as they do that crashing, smashing fullback who has a name you have to sneeze, meaning Wascalonis.

Pitt-Tech Set for Battle

have entered Tech games hot favorites, only to emerge with the tarred end of the stick in their hands. Since the resumption of grid relations between the two schools in 1923, Tech has won three out of the four games played, and in all but one contest have entered play the underdog.

When Pitt and Tech meet, regardless of what either may have, its just a case of two fighting clubs on the field, and may the best man win.

Today's game will start at 2:30 p. m. and will be preceded by a clash between two freshmen elevens of the schools. The game will begin at 12:30.

ARMY-YALE CLASH

While this game is attracting the interest of this territory, throughout the country battles of premier interest are carded. From east to west, and way stations, undefeated and untied championship contenders will clash, and others, already defeated, will strive to erase the stigma of earlier defeats.

In the east, the Army and Yale, old rivals, battle at the Polo Grounds. Army is unbeaten, while Yale bowed to the Crackers of Georgia two weeks ago. Cornell will face the first test of the year in a ferocious Princeton Tiger, with a fine aerial attack designed to offset the powerful tackle drives of the Big Red machine.

W. & J., a local title aspirant, undefeated though twice scored on, faces Lafayette at Easton. Lafayette was going along fine until they were held to a tie by West Virginia last Saturday. Penn State, fresh from a triumph, unexpected though it was, over Penn, meets a green but dangerous Orange eleven at Syracuse.

John Harvard, with its star, Guarrancia, in the backfield, will endeavor to continue the good work of winning ball games started against Holy Cross last week by taking Dartmouth's Green threat into camp. Another undefeated team, Catholic University, faces Holy Cross at Boston.

Jimmy DeHart's fine Duke University machine, conquerors of Boston College, has the Navy for an opponent at Baltimore.

Out in the west, in the only big intersectional game of the day, Lou Young's crippled but embattled Pennsylvanians meet Chicago U, one of the pace setters in the Big Ten.

Notre Dame will attempt to keep a clean slate by beating Indiana. Ohio State and Michigan expect to set a new attendance record as they meet to dedicate the new Wolverine stadium at Ann Arbor. Northwestern and Illinois battle at Evanston and Purdue and Wisconsin hook up in an important game at Madison. Minnesota faces Iowa at Minneapolis in the remaining Big Ten game.

CARDS MEET AGGIES

Pop Warner hopes to get his Stanford Cardinals started on the titular path with a victory against the Oregon Aggies on the west coast. Missouri, the best bet for the title in the Missouri Valley Conference, has an intersectional game with Southern Methodist in Texas.

Tulane and Vanderbilt and Sewanee and Alabama will play the important southern games.

There are three other local games of interest. Geneva will try to keep its slate clean against Waynesburg in a Class B Conference game at Beaver Falls and Allegheny and Grove City renew grid arguments at Grove City. West Virginia Wesleyan makes another trip east, playing Boston College in the Hub.

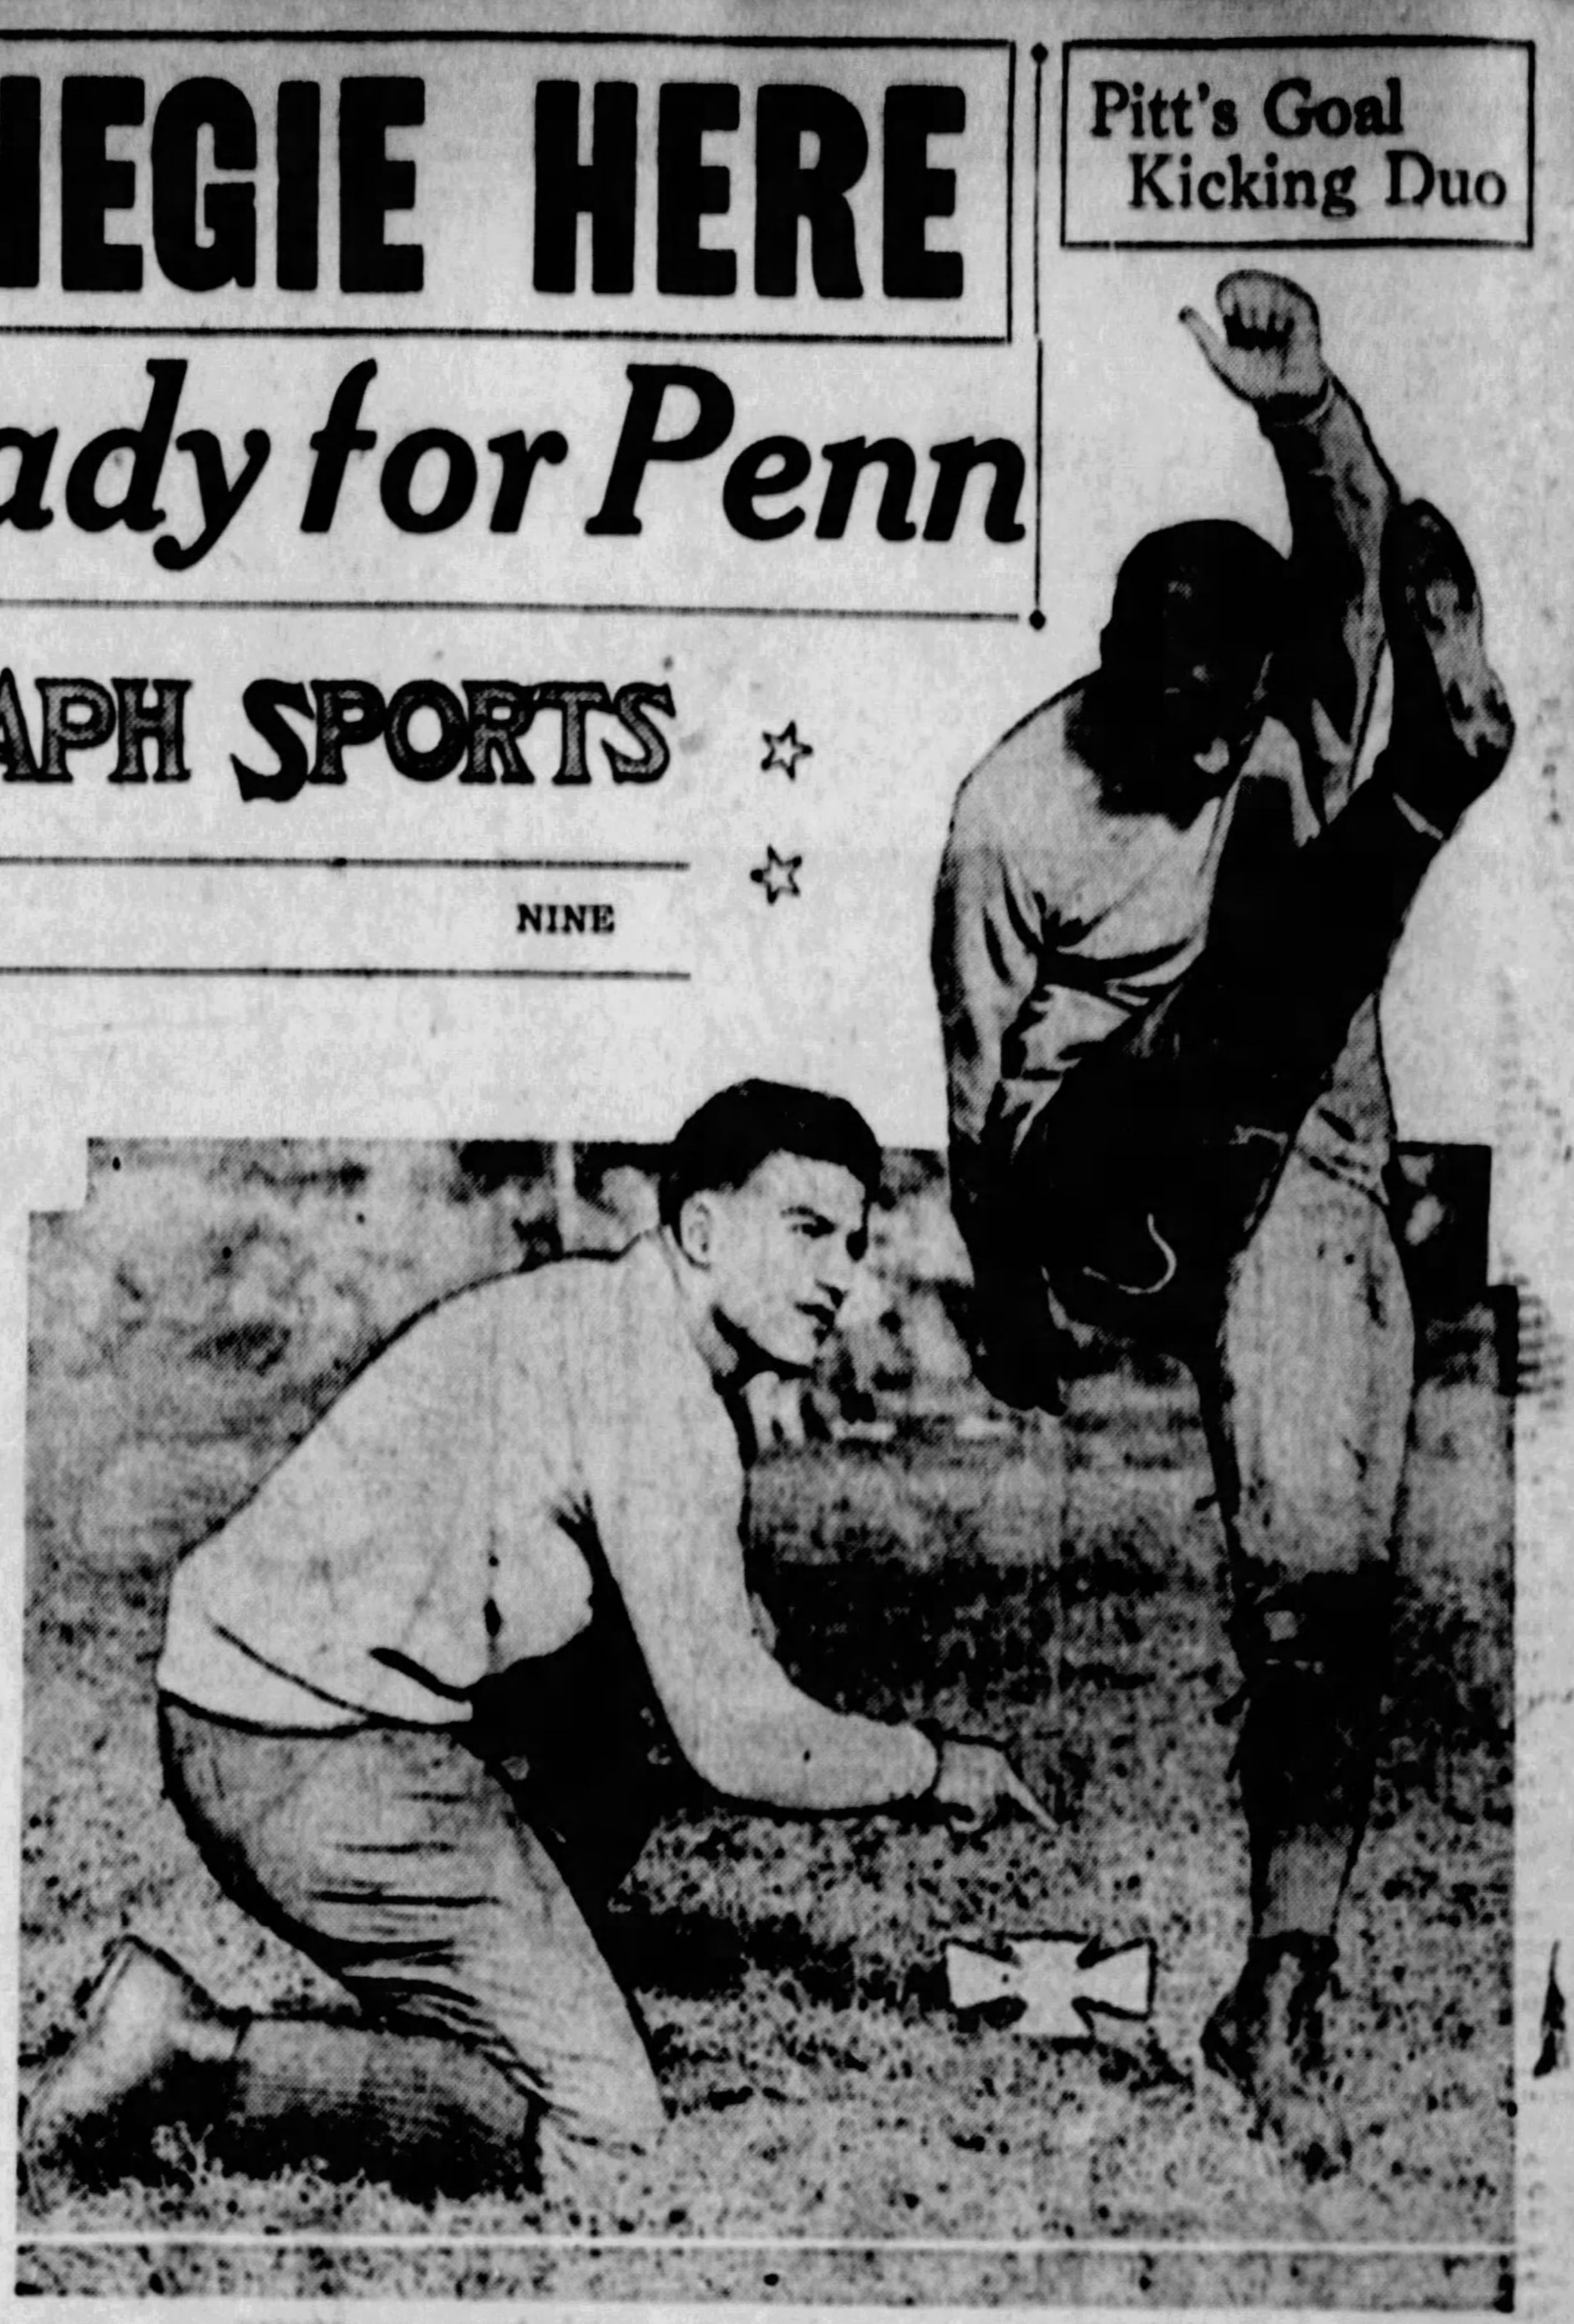
Ohio State Fan Dies En Route To Game

MONROE, Mich., Oct. 22.—R. F. Miller, about 46, of 1848 Granville road, Columbus, O., died here in a hospital last night from heart disease after an attack believed to have been caused by excitement during a discussion of the Michigan-Ohio State football game.

Miller was riding with three Columbus companions to Ann Arbor, where the game will be played today. On reaching Monroe he complained of illness and was rushed to a hospital. The other three continued to Ann Arbor.

Coroner George J. Huber took charge of the body pending instructions from relatives.

Pitt's Goal Kicking Duo



GIBBY WELCH — DICK BOOTH

Fullback Booth does the field and touchdown goal kicking for the Pitt Panthers and Captain and Halfback Gibby Welch holds the ball in position for him on these tries. Whitey Hagan is the team's regular punter. X marks the spot where the ball was before Booth kicked it. It isn't there now, unless it's hiding behind the X.

SPEAKING of SPORTS

by HARRY KECK

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

SKINNY JOHNNY MURPHY of Johnstown is the hero of the Bluff today, as followers of the Duquesne University Dukes are singing his praises for the great part he played in the institution's gridiron victory over Tommy Holleran's Thiel College stars yesterday.

It was "that skinny kid" Murphy who upset the works for Thiel throughout and was the star of the last-minute forward-passing drive that netted the winning touchdown. Throughout the game the little quarterback's generalship was a fine thing and in the end he completely crossed up the opposition by passing almost half the length of the field in a diagonal direction to Ganzy Benedict for the deciding touchdown.

Benedict has been the Dukes' regular passer and Murphy heretofore has been mainly just a quarterback directing the team. Yesterday, however, Johnny broke out in a rash of running back punts and passing that stamped him as a star of the first rank. While Thiel was watching Benedict as the main threat, Murphy was cantering on his way to fame in the Duke annals.

Murphy also has starred in other games for the Dukes this season, but never before to the extent of yesterday. From now on he'll bear plenty of watching.

PHIL GOLDSTEIN arrived back in town today from New York as fit as a fiddle for his bout with Tommy Crowley (or Crawley, have it your own way), which will be the windup of eight rounds at Motor Square Garden next Monday night. He said he was confident of winning decisively over his keen local rival.

"You will remember that I surprised the boys by uncorking a real punch after training in New York for my other fight with Crowley," Phil said. "Well, I'm hitting even harder now, and I have just had several bouts under my belt in a short time. I do not want to brag, but I am confident I will prove too good for Tommy this time."

Meanwhile Crowley wound up his training at the Pittsburgh Lyceum this afternoon, also breathing the fire of defiance and expressing confidence that he would win.

IT is only fitting that Pitt and Carnegie Tech should get the finest football weather of the season for their annual battle in the stadium this afternoon. Playing under such ideal conditions each team will be able to put its best game on tap and the chance of a fluke deciding the struggle for city supremacy is reduced to a minimum, while from the standpoint of the spectators nothing more could be asked than the sun-tempered autumnal afternoon.

HARRY GREB, former middleweight champion of the world and the best all-round fighter ever developed in Pittsburgh, died one year ago today while undergoing an operation on one of his eyes at Atlantic City. Last Monday night, while watching the bouts at Motor Square Garden, a regular ringside patron made this remark:

"I'd give almost anything to see Harry Greb back in there again for just one night. I used to 'razz' him and become irked at some of his antics, but, now that he is gone, I realize what a truly great fighter he was."

There's a sentiment in which virtually every fight-goer of Pittsburgh will concur.

PITTSBURGH is to be the future home of one of the best Negro fighters in the country. He is Harry Dudley, of Oakland, Cal., a welterweight, who came into the city about a week ago and will remain under the management of Billy Lewis, who also handles Kid Crutchfield and Jackie Murray, the 140-pounder of Philadelphia. Dudley will be seen in action shortly either at Motor Square Garden or McKeesport. He boasts a great record. He has boxed Joe Dundee, the welterweight champion, a close 12-round bout; beaten and drawn with Willie Harmon, knocked out Sergt. Sammy Baker and won over Georgie Ward, Paul Doyle, Bermondsey Billy Wells, Oakland Jimmy Duffy and Young Jack Dempsey, among others. Crutchfield, who recently returned to the ring after an absence of three years, has a bout in the making with Bob Lawson at Toronto. Manager Lewis may be addressed at 3767 East street, North Side. His telephone number is Fairfax 1407.

REISELT RETAINS TITLE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22. — Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia retained the world's three-cushion billiard championship by defeating Gus Copulos of Detroit here last night, 300 to 233, and breaking his own record for a 300-point match. The previous record was made by Reiselt in Chicago last March when he won the championship from Augie Kieckhefer in 299 innings. In defeating Copulos, the titleholder compiled his necessary points in 293 innings for an average of 1 7-293.

HOPPE TRAILS DE ORO

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Willie Hoppe trailed Alfredo de Oro, 600 to 575, at the finish of the tenth block of their three-cushion match here last night. Only two more blocks are to be played.

COCHRAN BEATS GERMAN

BOSTON, Oct. 22—Welker Cochran of California, 18.2 balk line billiard champion, defeated Eric Hagenlacher of Germany, 2,380 to 1,172 in an exhibition match concluded here last night.

ELLWOOD CITY SIGNS FRED LOEFFLER

By VERNON A. SWARTFAGER.

Fred Loeffler has resigned from the Brackenridge Heights Country Club, it was announced this morning, and has signed up with the Ellwood City Country Club, where he will assume his duties the latter part of this month. He succeeds Louis Galton.

Fred will act in a dual role at Ellwood City. He will be greenkeeper as well as professional.

Loeffler got his early training over the same grounds where most of the other members of his golfing family got theirs—at the Oakmont Country Club. He will be a good man for the job.

HALF OF Y. M. H. A. RING CARD IS ANNOUNCED

Half of the program for the amateur boxing show to be staged by the Young Men's Hebrew Association in its building on Bellefield avenue, Thursday, November 3, has been announced by Ben Giffen, chairman of the boxing committee. Eight bouts are planned for the card.

The four bouts arranged by Giffen are Scott Dela Verona, vs. Frank Lang, Willow A. C., 124 pounds; John Brown, Willow A. C., vs. George Guiss, Clairton, 135 pounds; Mickey Verbanick, unattached, vs. George Evans, Swissvale A. C., 112 pounds, and Amos Bothark, unattached, vs. S. Cetnaroski, Monessen, 160 pounds.

This show will mark the opening of the winter sports program at the Young Men's Hebrew Association and is expected to attract a capacity turnout.

John T. Taylor, secretary of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., is assisting Ben Giffen in arranging the program.

available for next Saturday's game is a question. If not, their places will be taken by Kelly, substitute end, Dible, and McQuiston.

Following the Duquesne game next week, Westminster will meet Waynesburg and Thiel on successive Saturdays, closing the season November 12 at Greenville against the Lutherans.

RAY SCHALK'S STATUS AS PILOT IN DOUBT

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—(AP.)—Silence enveloped the Chicago White Sox headquarters today, following the return of Manager Ray Schalk from a three weeks' visit with Owner Charles A. Comiskey at the "Old Roman's" camp in the North Wisconsin woods. Schalk declined to discuss the renewal of his manager's contract, and other officials confined themselves to statements that "steps already have been taken to assure the club the best team it has had in eight years."

This was a reference to the pennant winning aggregation of 1919, which was broken up by the Black Sox disclosures of the following autumn. Schalk said he would devote his time to his real estate interests pending formal announcement of his status. He has been catcher on the team for 14 years, and last year was manager.

Whereas A Girl Risks Her All To Get A Rich Society Husband

IT NEVER PAYS

Margie Decides a Business Career Would Be Great; She Writes a Letter

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

MARGIE MARSH comes to New York with a thousand dollars and a wonderful education. She learns stenography, keeps house with four other girls and after three years of struggle decides to get married. But first she has to pick out the man. She thinks of Rob Saunders, goes to a show with him and finds out what his interests in life are.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

WAS she being unfair to him? "You don't really think a woman ought to work all her life?" she asked, "Just working and working—and never going anywhere, doing anything?"

"Why shouldn't she? That's what life is, isn't it?"

She stared, did not speak. Behind him she seemed to see like a wraith the ghost of some old Puritan ancestor, who had hated joy in others because there was no joy in his own heart.

Then all at once a sadness, overwhelming and keen, rushed over her. This might be Rob Saunders—but wouldn't every man have something just as unfriendly in him? Why, that was why you had to fall in love with a man at the start—so you could forgive him afterwards when you found out what he was really like.

She felt foolishly, absurdly, like weeping. How the waiter would stare, how Rob would look at her. They would crowd around her, perhaps, asking her if she had a pain or something, and she would be unable to tell them.

"Let's go home. Let's go home." She was saying that. And then she was standing in the vestibule of the apartment.

"You know you're different from other girls." Was she? "And I'm going to see a lot of you." Was he? "I can see we both think the same way about things." Could he? In his eyes she read the intention of a kiss. She held out her hand suddenly, whirled and ran inside.

Then two steps at a time. Bang went the front door, flying open.

"Oh, Margie, you're enough to take anyone's breath away. What do you think has happened?"

Florence Clark faced her. Side by side on the wide couch, among the little, round, soft pillows sat the little, round, soft Graham sisters. But their faces were troubled.

"Madame Andree," Florence breathlessly exclaimed, "is going to sell the beauty shop—she has to go abroad because her son is sick. And Billie and Betty may be out of jobs."

"Out of jobs?" Margie shook off the suggestion. "Why, anyone who buys the place will want them first of all."

"But you can't tell. And she's asking only $2,000 and anyone might pick it up," Billie protested. "And Madame liked us. Somebody else may hate us."

Margie stared and stared. Marriage—that was no escape at all. But financial independence—your own business—that was something really sensible. Two thousand dollars and presto, the proprietor of a beauty shop. Madame Margie, no, Madame Sara. Except that sounded like Bernhardt. Suppose she could get $2,000 somewheres, out of the sky, perhaps—what fun, what utter fun!

"What ever on earth are you smiling about, Margie?" Betty Graham asked. "This is really serious."

"Darling, it's my flippant nature. But don't you worry about your job. Everything's going to be all right."

CHAPTER IV.

SHE told herself she was a little goat, jumping with hard, shiny hoofs every which way. First in this direction, then in that. Deciding to marry on Monday, deciding to have a career on Tuesday. But eventually you did find out, if you went on trying, just what you actually wanted to do.

"I will never speak to you or see you again as long as I live!"

That was what she had said to her dour aunt when the latter had sneered at her father. But you had to swallow your pride in life. Margie had written a letter, gently asking for the return of the $2,000 she had loaned.

That was why in the mornings she ran down first of all to look at the mail box in the hall. That was why she sat over her typewriter in the Pantheon offices, planning, smiling, picturing her beauty shop.

The customers would come in. She would greet them with just the correct shade of politeness, make them feel her skill, her ability to turn everything she touched to beauty. The profits would roll in, next some branch shops, with Billie and Betty installed as managers of the first two, at enormous salaries.

Then in about a year—no, six months—she would retire, go south, perhaps. Or was Palm Beach played out? Perhaps it would be better, after all, to go abroad. On the steamer there would be a fascinating man. . . . She saw him distinctly. He had a mustache, was about 32, and he had wise eyes, but with deep kindness and understanding in them. "My dear," he murmured, "the moonlight on the water is no more wonderful to me than . . ."

"Copy this letter over—you've made two mistakes in it." A voice of reality, Mr. Hedge's, harsh and cross. Margie bent her head to hide a little grin at her own foolishness.

She typed away.

But next morning she came to the office, looking straight before her, and feeling angry and hurt. There had been a letter in the mail-box at last.

A letter, full of whining indignation. Her aunt reminded her that Margie had lent the money

With Women as Well as With Men Wilson Formed Close Attachments, But His Wife Was the Dominating Influence of His Life

How the progressive group at Princeton was led by Wilson was made clear in yesterday's installment of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" in the Sun-Telegraph. How greatly he was needed there was indicated by the generosity of his and the university's friends in adding to his income that he might decline calls to more remunerative employment. In spite of financial strain that compelled grueling work, the home life of the Wilsons was delightful, as told by Biographer Baker.

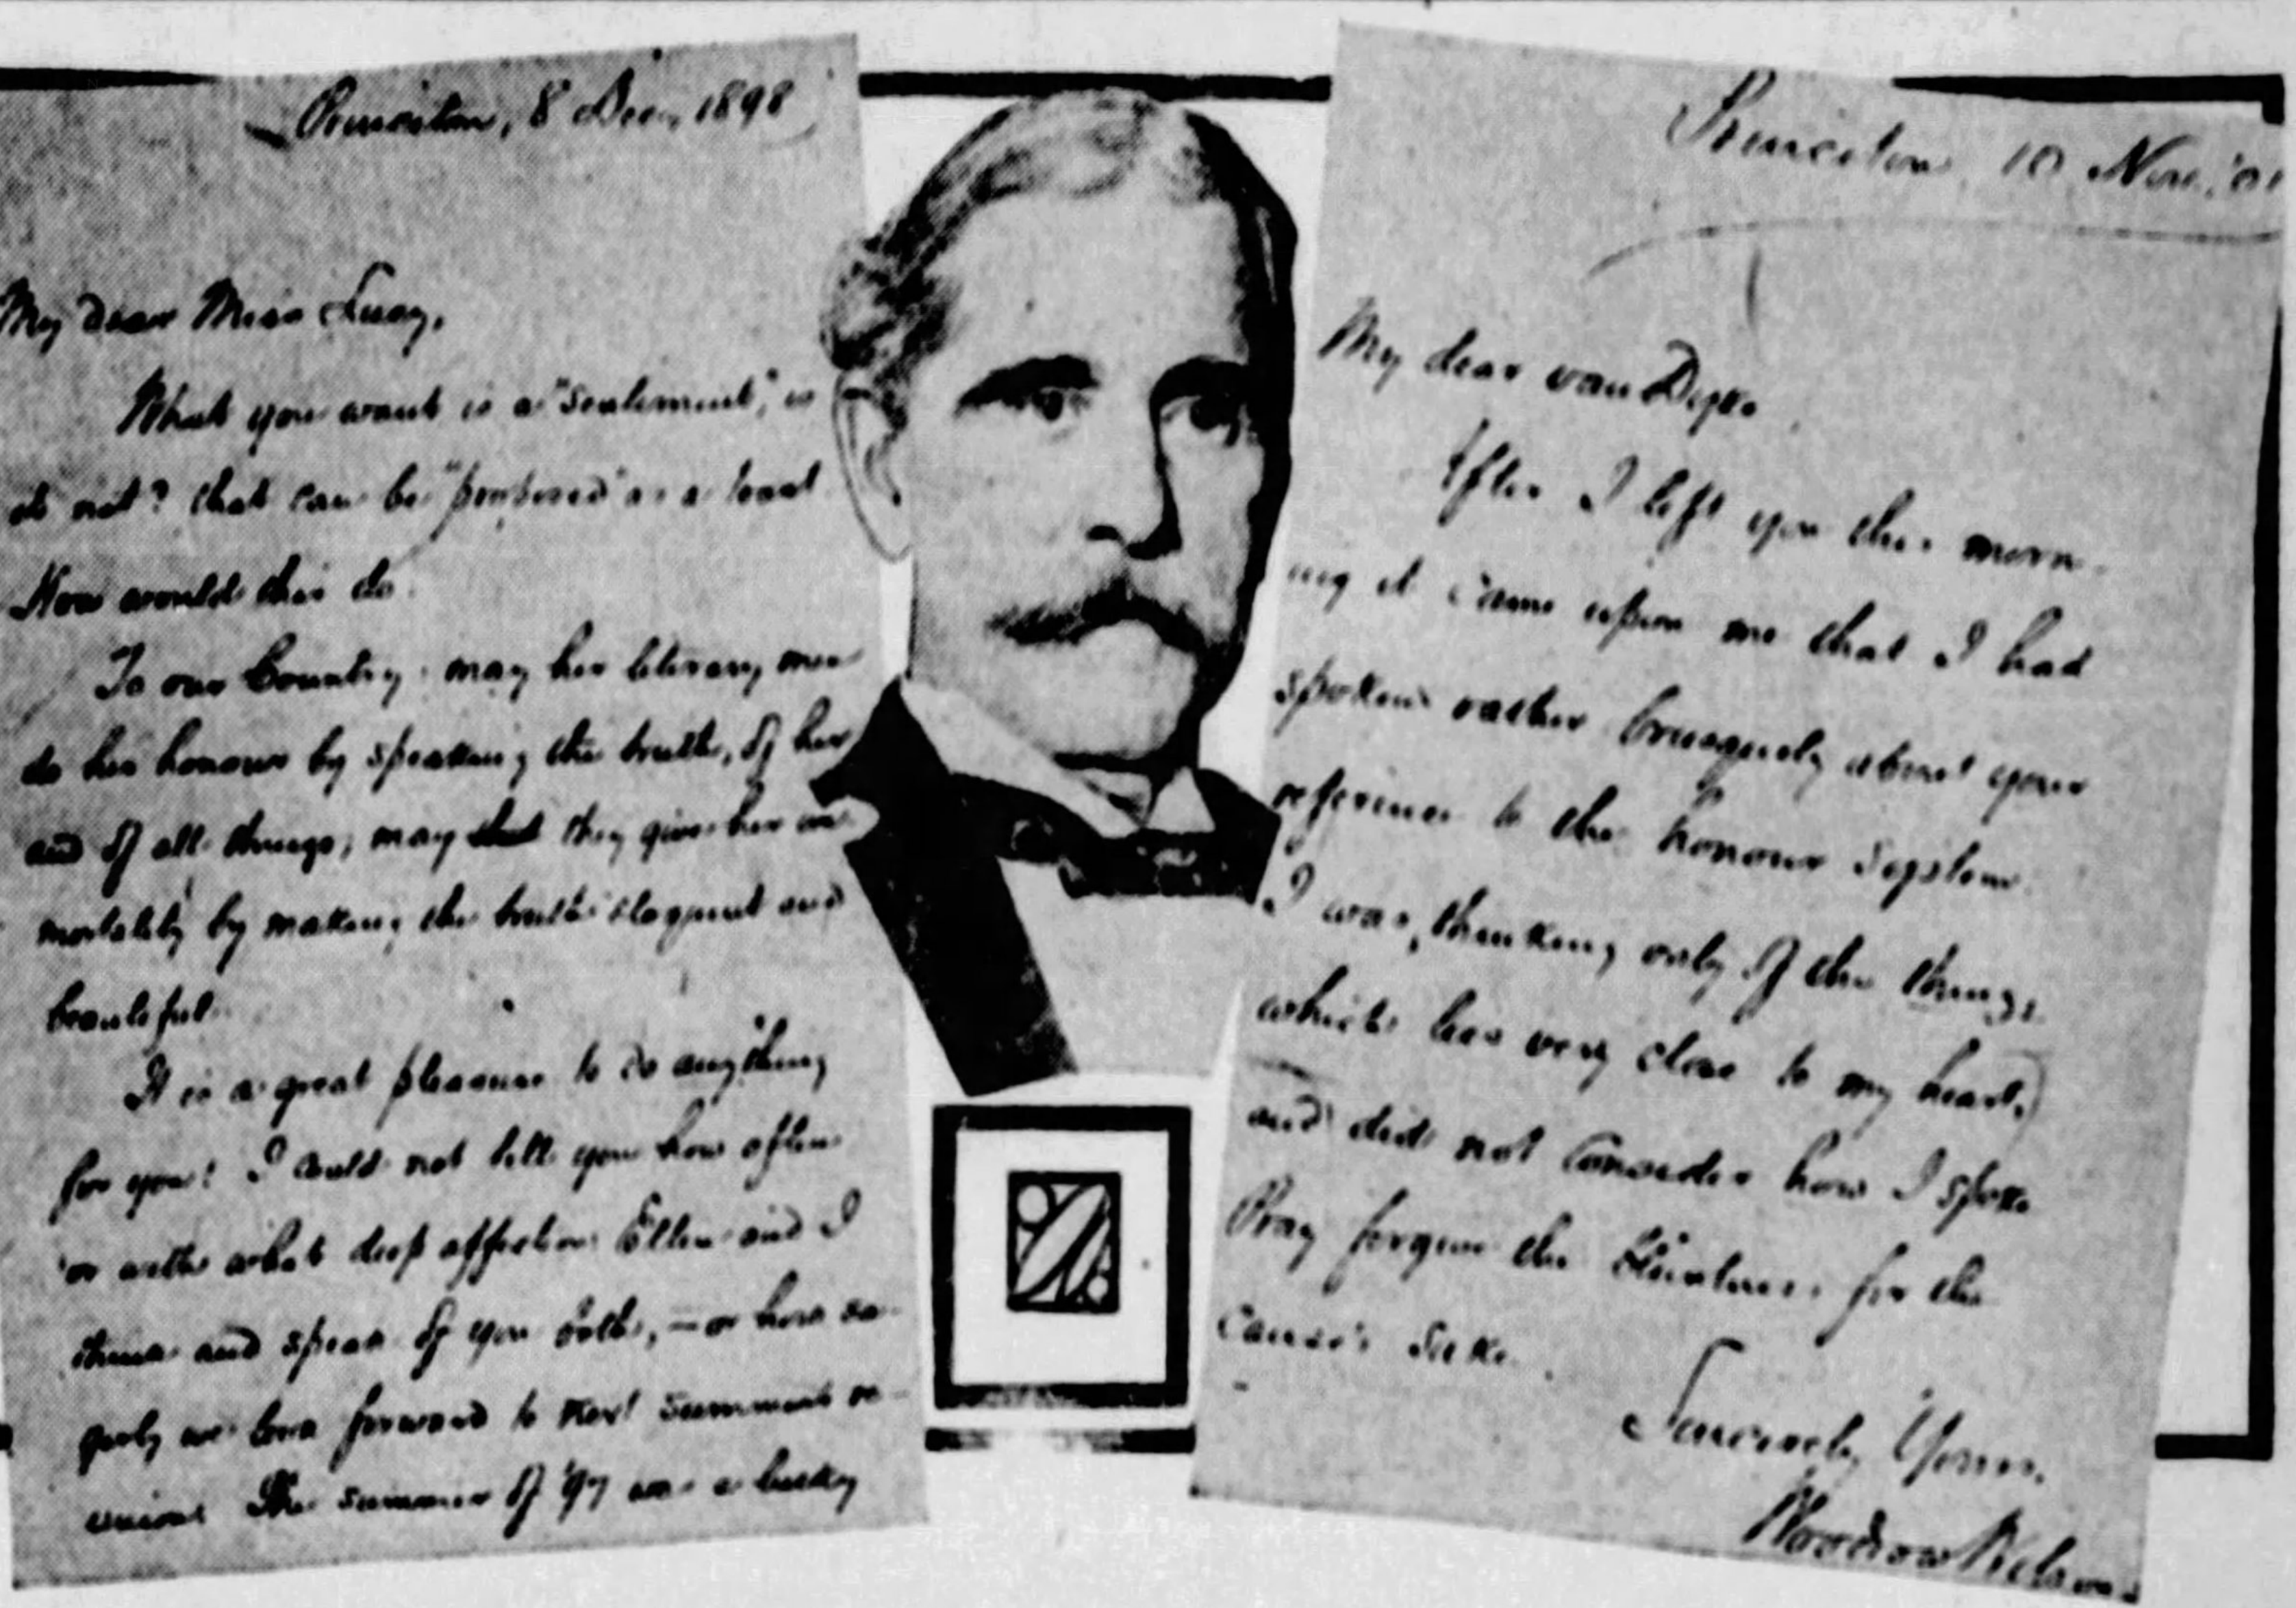
SHOWING MENTAL ALERTNESS AND SENSE OF HONOR



Princeton, 8 Dec. 1898

My dear Miss Lucy,

What you want is a "sentiment," is it not? that can be "proposed" at a toast. How would this do:

To our Country: may her literary men do her honour by speaking the truth of her and of all things; may they give her immortality by making the truth eloquent and beautiful.

It is a great pleasure to do anything for you! I could not tell you how often or with what deep affection Ellen and I think and speak of you both,—or how eagerly we look forward to next summer's reunion. The summer of '97 was a lucky

Princeton, 10 Nov. '01

My dear van Dyke,

After I left you this morning it came upon me that I had spoken rather brusquely about your reference to the honour system. I was thinking only of the thing which lies very close to my heart, and did not consider how I spoke. Pray forgive the bluntness for the cause's sake.

Sincerely Yours,
Woodrow Wilson

Wilson's quickness to right a wrong is indicated by his letter to Dr. Henry Van Dyke (shown above); his aptness in framing sentiments stands out in his letter to Miss Lucy Smith, December, 1898.

Men and Women Friends

DURING many years at Princeton the friendships of a small group, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Hibben, Mrs. and Miss Ricketts and often Prof. and Mrs. Bliss Perry and others, were remarkable. Scarcely a day passed when they did not have tea together and spend an hour of rare good talk, Prof. Perry says in a letter to the author.

"For a long time, on Sunday evenings, Mr. and Mrs. Hibben, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Perry and I used to meet regularly for tea at the house of Miss Ricketts, and I think Wilson was always at his best on those occasions. If he could be criticized at all as a general talker, it might be that he sometimes seemed more interested in what he was saying than in what you were saying; but perhaps this is only like a skillful golfer playing against you who is more intent upon his own shots than upon yours. Certainly the conversational game interested him and fascinated him."

Wilson's letters to his wife are full of lively glimpses of these gatherings and of his devotion to friends like the Hibbens:

"I went around to their house (the Hibbens'), as usual, at 4 o'clock, to find that I was to go to Miss Ricketts' alone. Jack had yielded to his conscience (!) and they were going to attend vespers at the chapel. I went off very much disappointed, and very abusive, to spend an hour with Miss R. and the Perrys. Mrs. Cleveland was kept at home by rain and the Gilders ('the Gilders' sounds like a disease, doesn't it?). Three such good talkers left me free to say little and miss you and the Hibbens, like a sulky boy. But nobody noticed me! . . ."

"I went over to dine with the Fines, you know; and, although I was tired, I enjoyed myself very much, indeed—because it was a company of intimate friends: the McCormicks, the Finleys, the Magies. We made a very cozy, easy-going company; and I was rather less tired when the evening was over than when it began—as much rested as I could have been at home without you."

A Letter of Apology

His friendships, however, precious as they were to him, never turned him aside when it came to the support of principles or policies he believed in—and therein lay some of the tragical problems of a later time. Whatever happened he must support what he considered right, even if it alienated his friends. Sometimes when he felt that his ardency in support of a cause might have hurt a friend, he could apologize for the method—never for the matter. Witness this letter to Dr. Henry Van Dyke:

"After I left you this morning it came upon me that I had spoken rather brusquely about your reference to the honor system. I was thinking only of the thing, which lies very close to my heart, and did not consider how I spoke. Pray forgive the bluntness for the cause's sake."

One of the remarkable aspects of Wilson's life was his friendship with women. Real friendship between men and women is so rare that most people cannot in the least understand it. In Wilson's life it played a very great part. Several such friendships, like that with the Misses Smith, of New Orleans; Mrs. Harry F. Reid, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Crawford H. Toy, of Boston, mostly begun during the years of the Princeton professorship, lasted with undimmed ardor to the end of his life. Other friendships, like that with Miss Ricketts and Mrs. Hibben, of Princeton, were scarcely less devoted. The correspondence connected with most of these friendships is voluminous.

Mrs. Sayre says that her father always liked brilliant women, enjoyed knowing them, enjoyed still more talking with them. "Cultivated and conversible" was one of his tests whether of a man or a woman. His letters to his wife contain many descriptions of his meetings with brilliant and interesting women.

Mrs. Wilson encouraged these friendships—indeed, they were often as much her friendships as his. She felt that she was often "too grave" or "too sober."

"I am not gamesome," she quoted Cassius.

She used frequently to say, according to Florence Hoyt:

"Since he has married a wife who is not gay, I must provide for him friends who are."

Miss Hoyt, in a letter to the author, says that Ellen Axson Wilson recognized the intellectual refreshment he had from clever women . . . There was never a woman more large-minded, more lacking in petty jealousies. . . .

Other Women Friends

One of the most charming of these friendships was with Miss Lucy and Miss Mary Smith of New Orleans. It began in the summer of 1897, when the Wilson family was spending a vacation in the mountains of Virginia. The Misses Smith were daughters of a Presbyterian minister who had been a classmate and great friend of Dr. Joseph R. Wilson. They were descendants of John Marshall. It seems to have been an instantaneous friendship on both sides, and although there was no blood relationship, it was not long before they were calling each other cousin—"Cousin Mary," "Cousin Lucy."

They were both extremely lively minded women, full of fun and with keen intellectual interests and enthusiasm. From that time onward they visited the Wilsons nearly every year, often spending the vacations with them, and during the time that Wilson was Governor of New Jersey, occupying a part of the house in Princeton where the Wilson family lived. The friendship was most intimate and charming throughout, as the correspondence indicates. Here are characteristic letters:

"September 15, 1897.

"My Dear Friend:

"You don't know how you have both taken hold on our hearts? Ellen begs (particularly since New Orleans doesn't now seem a good place to go to for some months to come) that you will not promise your Kentucky kinsfolk to come to them at the very first of October, but that you will generously give us the full time at first agreed upon, at least, and I cry aloud Amen. . . .

"Yours with affectionate regard,
"WOODROW WILSON."

He writes the next year:

"My Dear Miss Lucy:

"What you want is a 'sentiment,' is it not, that can be 'proposed' at a toast? How would this do:

"To our Country: May her literary men do her honor by speaking the truth of her and of all things; may they give her immortality by making the truth eloquent and beautiful.

"It is a great pleasure to do anything for you! I could not tell you how often or with what deep affection Ellen and I think and speak of you both—or how eagerly we look forward to next summer's reunion. The summer of '97 was a lucky summer and made us rich with this new friendship, which now seems always to have been ours. The dear busy little woman has been meaning to write to one or both of you for some months, but seems always obliged to do something else, or to go at once to sleep when evening comes after the breathless day. You are generous, both of you, to write without reckoning exact exchanges of letters like exacting creditors, and we are very much in debt because you write so much better letters than we do; but we do the best we can. . . .

"Ellen and the children join me in a big message of love to you both, and I am, though I am writing as fast as I can,

"Your devoted friend,
"WOODROW WILSON."

His Wife's Influence

At the center of Wilson's life, however, the moving influence in it, though never dominating its purpose nor substantially changing its course, was Ellen Axson Wilson. He was astonishingly dependent upon her for sympathy. In order to do his best work he had to live in an atmosphere of understanding. From the very beginning, before they were married, they had agreed to be absolutely honest with each other in everything. If anything was wrong with the health or the mental attitude of either, he or she was frank about it. Whenever there was illness or accident in the family, if one was away, there was never any attempt to conceal the truth, even to relieve anxiety. They shared their friends, their books, their pleasures, their ills. The reading of an immense accumulation of family letters, extending over a period of 30 years, reveals the remarkable fact that there is not an unkind or censorious word in any of them—not one. This does not mean that mistakes were not made, that there were not differences of opinion, but these were met with a courtesy and gentleness that could only have been prompted by the deepest affection. Mrs. Wilson's brother, Stockton Axson, an intimate of the family for many years, has said:

"We often hear it said of a married pair—so often that it has become a sort of 'bromide'—'A cross word never passed between that couple.' I have been honestly trying to think if I ever heard anything approaching an altercation between Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, and I cannot recall even a shadow of such. And yet these were no weaklings, but two spirited people, each with a power of conviction possible only to very strong characters. They would sometimes differ in their opinions, but their relationship was so rooted in mutual love and loyalty that their differences were casual and superficial, never fundamental.

"I have seen Mr. Wilson humorously assume the role of a brow-beaten and henpecked person, unallowed to hold an opinion, when his wife would say in her impetuous way, 'Woodrow, you know you don't think that!' and he would smile and say, 'Madam, I was venturing to think that I thought that until I was corrected.' At one time, when the girls were growing up, he used to laugh and quote Chief Justice Fuller, who remarked that his 'jurisdiction extended over all the United States except the Fuller family.' I have sometimes wondered how a family composed of varying and very positive elements ever contrived to live in such absolute and undisturbed harmony as did the Wilson family, and I have come to the conclusion that such a result can be attained only in one way, not by any prescription, or plan or domestic 'scheme' of action, but only by enthroning love supreme—that where love is always master, every day and every hour, there must be harmony."

Letters of Affection

We do not, however, need the testimony of others, for the letters are full of the evidence of this relationship. Using material such as this is indeed "lifting the veil from some pretty sacred things," as Stockton Axson observes—but few men have been attacked in such dastardly and disgraceful ways, with such utter disregard for the truth, as Woodrow Wilson. It has seemed necessary therefore to set forth the facts even to the point of indiscretion.

Woodrow Wilson's letter to Ellen Axson Wilson, then are full not only of evidences of his dependence upon his wife but of his deep and continuing affection for her.

"Certain it is that your sweet courage and hopefulness, your calm-eyed love of beauty and of duty, have done me unspeakable service."

"You are so reliable, whatever a fellow may want—whether sense, or sensibility, or imagination, or mere joy and fun! To possess you is to possess all resources"

He can say of one of his greatest literary ambitions:

"At any rate, thoughts of you will animate me through every page. I shall write for you . . . We must be partners in this, as in everything—else I shall grow cold to the marrow, and write without blood or life . . . I am not a fellow to be imposed upon, madam, by superficial charms or a first impression. Very few people, alas! wear well with me; but your charm deepens with every year . . ."

When she is away he writes every day, the eager letters of a lover:

"I want you to sit down before the mirror, if you can find time and place in that disordered house, and describe your appearance to me. Are your cheeks rosy? Are there lines of fatigue about your eyes, or do they shine clear and fresh? Do you look plump or is much traveling and much nursing and much managing making you look thin—pulled down? Are the lines of your cheeks rounded or straight, dragging a little?"

Lonely for Her

"When you go to church (the tomorrow after you get this letter), can't you sit near where you sat the first time I saw you—it was about where Uncle James Bones's pew used to be—and (will it be wrong in church?) think of me, or all the sweet things that first glimpse of you made possible for both of us. . . . Forget all the suffering and hard work and anxiety and think only of that which has illuminated and beautified everything, our perfect love for each other. Have you gone any of the ways we went walking, or any of the ways we went driving together—and have they recalled anything? . . . By the way, I've been reading Herrick, and here's a little poem, entitled 'Of Love: A Sonnet,' which comes so near my present mood and meaning in one or two particulars that I must quote it:

"'How love came in I do not know,
Whether by the eye or ear, or no;
Or whether with the soul it came
(At first) infused with the same;
Whether in part 'tis here or there,
Or, like the soul, whole everywhere,
This troubles me; but I as well
As any other this can tell:
That when from hence she does depart
The outlet then is from the heart.'

"Though, if I were looking for a poem to express both what I felt when I first saw you and what all our subsequent life has shown me of yourself and of the sweet things of love, I should adopt Wordsworth's 'She was a phantom of delight,' line for line, word for word, dropping not a syllable, except to fit the color of your hair! That poem almost perfectly expresses both my mind's and my heart's judgments of you." . . .

When he is in Colorado lecturing in 1894, he says:

"It is so dull to be away from you. Life is so much more commonplace without you. That is one of the depressing and degrading things you have saved me from: a commonplace life. It is so fresh and sweet and interesting where you are."

And later:

"How exciting it is to be writing my last letter before starting for home! . . . You are the center of my life, and I seem to lose force in direct proportion to my distance from you."

Such was the intimate family and social life of the Princeton professor. His intellectual life, the steady growth of his convictions, his passion for improving the world he lived in, were things apart.

How Wilson began to be a traveler abroad will be told tmorrow. His first and second trips to Europe were events marked by many letters home. On his return he settled down again to writing books, in addition to his arduous work at Princeton.

Whereas A Girl Risks Her All To Get A Rich Society Husband

IT NEVER PAYS

by Gilbert Rogers

unreservedly. She said it was quite what she expected, to have a demand made upon her when things were at the very worst. Ah, well, this was a world in which the righteous had to suffer. The idea of a girl getting an immense salary in the city, demanding money from a poor woman living on a lonely farm—

It was an unbelievable, detestable, dishonest letter. Margie tore it into strips, dropped them in the gutter, ground her teeth together. Mean—just a mean old woman—an old hypocrite. Tears of rage came into Margie's eyes.

Why was everything so hard? Why was it so difficult to do what you wanted? She could have done so well with that beauty shop! . . . Could have done? The phrase echoed in her mind. Why couldn't she still do it? Why couldn't she borrow the money somewheres? Thank heavens, she had said nothing to her friends about her hopes. What a fool she'd have looked if she had told them.

But no inspiration came. She sat over the typewriter once more. She felt nervous, somehow, as if her youth were going from her, all her youth to have good times, going right in front of her, while she watched, across the plum-colored carpets, out of the door. And suddenly she had turned herself into an old, thin thing, pounding away, pounding away, still on the same typewriter, copying the same contracts . . . She wasn't going to do that. She wasn't, she wasn't!

A door of one of the private offices swung softly outward. A man's voice, talking to Mr. Hedges, an insolent, tired voice.

"I wouldn't raise a cent for that proposition, Hedges. It's no good—d'ye think I'm crazy."

Dan Shevlin, immaculate, rather scornful, with his cool eyes, sauntered out. Dan Shevlin who raised—and lent—money!

Impulses, they ruled Margie's life. She flung herself breathlessly headlong into this new one. If you stopped and thought about a thing, you didn't do it. If you took chances, the wrong things might happen. But if you didn't take chances, nothing would happen. And that was worse.

"Mr. Shevlin, I want to talk to you—about a business thing. Really and truly."

Hard, shrewd eyes exploring her face, running over her, calculating.

"Why not? I was just about to drink some of the bad coffee they serve in the building cafeteria downstairs. Come along and drink some of it with me."

"Well . . . if you could wait. I've one more letter to do. And then get it signed. It won't take me a second. And—"

He waved his hand, sat down, watched her while she typed.

"Oh, dear, don't look at me like that. I'll make mistakes."

Downstairs in the white-tiled restaurant she sat presently with a cup of tea and a wedge of sticky chocolate cake before her. And Dan saying amusing things, as if he hated everyone and everything, but not quite enough to lose his temper about it.

"Well, my dear?"

"It's like this . . ." Where were those glowing words to describe the beauty shop, it's inevitable success, the certainty that a loan of $2,000 would come back to the lender threefold. Instead, stumbling sentences, as if she were lying or trying to cheat. No wonder he merely shook his head, and lit a cigaret.

"Businesses run by women? If they ever do succeed, it's accident. What do you want to go into business for?"

"What does anyone want to for?" Margie retorted.

He looked at her with a slow smile. "Money? Well, why don't you marry a rich man instead? It's much easier."

His lack of belief in her, his conviction that she had no scruples or hesitations, amused instead of irritated her. It was easy to fall into the same idle attitude, to pretend.

"Easier? A lot you know about it. Clothes — I wonder if you have any idea of the clothes I'd need . . ."

He closed one eye. "My dear, I have. I was once married, and since then, several sweet things have been good enough to put their bills into my hands." The lean, saturnine face seemed to tower over her, with its insolent assurance, its slow, hard smile. "Of course you'd need clothes—I admit it."

"And if I had then," she ended defiantly, "what use would they be? Where and how would I meet any rich men?"

His finger was on his lips, and his pale, cold eyes went across her head, searching the invisible.

"Now if you'd come to me with a suggestion like this, I'd have considered it. Lending money to a man is investing in his business. Lending money to a woman should be investing in her business—marrying the richest man she can find." He seemed to be enjoying the sound of his own voice, and went on toying with the idea. "Suppose you had asked me to stake you—let you buy all the clothes you needed—then introduced you somewheres—Southampton, say, or even Newport. You're very good-looking, and you're the kind of a girl men marry. I'd call it a safe investment."

Something seemed to move in Margie's pulses. She felt them throbbing madly. A little wave of excitement rippled through her. She hardly knew her own voice as she said with a kind of desperate gayety:

"All right! All right, then! Invest in me!"

CHAPTER V.

"OH, but I was just talking," he said. "I was being funny—you've been taking me seriously."

"But it's possible—you yourself say it's possible," Margie protested. Why was she arguing like this, clutching at straws, seizing upon anything and everything. Was it only in the hope of sharing something of the power and the beauty of life before, too late, it passed her by forever!

Dan Shevlin let his gaze rest upon her. He liked her, even admired her impulsiveness. She could feel that instinctively. But he could sneer at even the things he liked.

He made a sweeping gesture and shrugged his shoulders.

"But I could marry someone with lots of money," Margie insisted. "If I had lots of clothes, that is, and had the chance to meet him the right way."

"You mean you'd get sentimental instead and marry his chauffeur."

"Don't be silly. I can be every bit as bad as you are! Oh, don't laugh—you're probably the worst man I've ever met. If you'll help me, I'll marry a rich man. I'm just sick of going on and doing nothing at all . . ."

"What about your beauty-shop, your idea of going into business for yourself?"

"Oh, that was just something, anything. I didn't want to do it for very long. I just wanted to do something different."

Shevlin's eyes were narrowed in thoughtful slits. Margie watched him breathlessly. A man moved between the cafeteria tables, gathering up cups and plates, noisily and lazily. Then Shevlin nodded as if to himself.

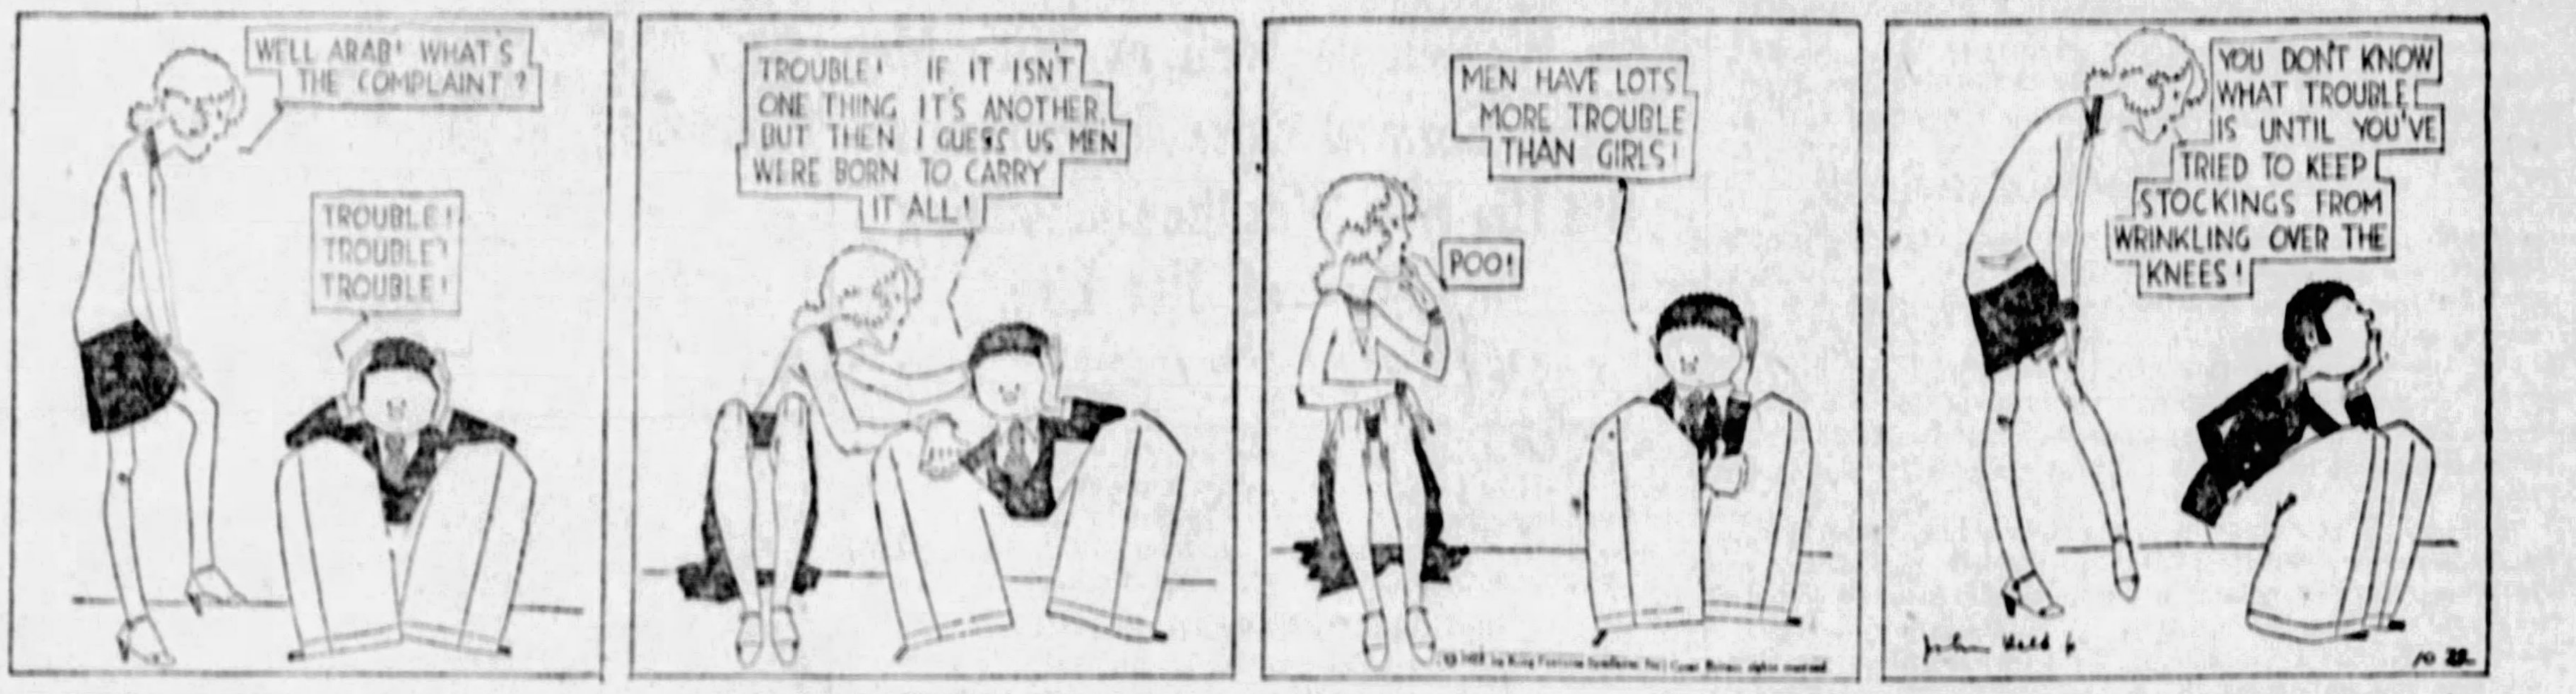
Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

By John Held, Jr.



WELL ARAB! WHAT'S THE COMPLAINT?
TROUBLE! TROUBLE! TROUBLE!
TROUBLE! IF IT ISN'T ONE THING IT'S ANOTHER. BUT THEN I GUESS US MEN WERE BORN TO CARRY IT ALL!
MEN HAVE LOTS MORE TROUBLE THAN GIRLS!
POO!
YOU DON'T KNOW WHAT TROUBLE IS UNTIL YOU'VE TRIED TO KEEP STOCKINGS FROM WRINKLING OVER THE KNEES!
John Held Jr
10-22

"REALly, my dear, I am THORoughly fed UP on having PIPsqueaks like ARab sort of coming ROUND at odd MOments and unFOLDing their TROUBles to you because youths like that are all the time getting TRIBulated about just some SILly little THING that doesn't amount to a ROW of LIPsticks, and then sort of exPECting a girl to SYMpathize with them about it, do you know what I mean? Honestly, my dear, I get all hot and BOTHered about it because WOMan's capacity for SUF'ring is HEAPS greater than MAN's and I honestly think GIRLS have HEAPS of simply tiTANic PROBlems and TROUBles and things on their hands all the entire TIME without saying a WORD about them, don't you really think they DO? I mean that's what makes me so SIMply RIPping when that FOUL little pipsqueak ARab sort of comes ROUND looking comPLETEly SUNK and expecting me to sort of sit HEAVily LISt'ning to him POUR forth his WOES which are practicably ALL simply IMAGinary! And, my dear, he honestly had the NERVE to tell me the other day that MEN had LOTS more trouble than GIRLS—can you BEAR it? I mean I think for him to make a remark like that when he KNOWS how much trouble I am having at this point to keep my STOCKings from WRINKling over my KNEES is SIMply VILE, my dear—I mean I ACtually DO!"

The Mysterious Letter Disappea rs During Bickering Over Service

FOR a tense second I waited, conscious of Miss Lincoln's astonished disapproving eyes upon my back, and more conscious of Mrs. Ticer's face struggling between her anger at the arrogant manner with which the chatelaine of The Larches had invested her direction to bring fresh tea and hot muffins, and a desire to obey my secret appeal to her. Then I saw affection for me triumph in my neighbor's open countenance and she smiled, although it was but a sad travesty of her usual beaming merriment.

"I have some of those cinnamon snaps right in the kitchen," she said. "I was afraid they weren't grand enough for the party. I'll bring them in right away."

With the tray in her hand she vanished into the house, and I turned to my young hostess with the apology which I knew was due her, and the enlightenment as to Mrs. Ticer's status which I saw she must have if she hoped to retain the services of that efficient but quick-tempered woman during her sojourned at The Larches.

"I do hope you will forgive me, Miss Lincoln," I said. "Under ordinary circumstances my interruption would be unwarranted and atrocious. But I feared that you did not understand the customs of the east end of the island, and saw that in another minute you would lose the services of your very excellent cook."

Miss Lincoln stared at me, patently astonished beyond measure.

"I do not understand," she said. "The woman was most impertinent. I reproved her as I always do a refractory servant. Only—I was so extremely mild because I know that in America things are—different."

It was the first direct intimation she had given that she was not American, although we all knew that she was a native of some European country.

"I am afraid you do not realize how different even yet," I told her smiling. "And down here at the east end of the island, the question is more complicated than in the cities. The wealthy families who summer on the coast bring their own staffs of servants and have regimes of their own. But the native country people who "help out" as they say, do not consider themselves servants, and are very much insulted if you call them so. Nor will they permit any form of address which one neighbor would not give another. Of course, if you wish to let her and her husband and son go, and import servants from the city, that is another matter.

Miss Lincoln gazed at me incredulously, but all the arrogance was gone from her manner.

"Do you mean that she would leave and take her husband and son with her just for those few words?" she asked.

"It wasn't the words," I explained. "It was your tone and manner which unmistakably reproved her for impertinence."

"But it was impertinence," she returned, plainly bewildered.

"I agree with you," Dicky interposed unexpectedly. He has ideas of his own upon the familiarity of the Ticers which I do not share.

Miss Lincoln flashed a relieved glance at him.

"I am glad you agree with me," she said. "But I see, nevertheless, that I must revise my ideas—and my conduct. I tried to get servants before coming out here, but they were such a rabble. I could just imagine how they would annoy Aunt Anna. She is not well, and I have to keep her tranquil and quiet. Mrs. Ticer is very good to her, and I shall remember that."

"I hope you do," I said to myself skeptically, but aloud I only murmured, "I am sure you will find her very faithful," and then Mrs. Ticer came back upon the veranda with fresh tea and muffins and plates of the little cinnamon snaps of which I had spoken. For the first time I had the chance to cast a quick, furtive glance at the low bookcase upon which Dicky had placed the soiled letter under a vase. But it was no longer there.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Anxious

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of your wonderful advice. I am in my teens and am in my second year of high school. Here is my trouble: This summer I met a very nice fellow. I saw him every day and he was very friendly and treated me like a gentleman should, but I don't see him so often now, only twice a week. I like him very much and I think he cares some for me. One day he asked me if I liked him, but he wouldn't tell me why, he said he just wanted to know. Miss Gale, do you think he likes me and why did he ask me if I liked him? How can I get better acquainted with him? Girls who say that there are no real gentlemen are mistaken—for I have found one. ANXIOUS.

Twice a week is often enough for you to see this boy, and since he comes so frequently he must like you. You are too young to be worrying so much about the sincerity of your feeling for each other. Be content with the friendship you have for a few years.

Pals

DEAR MISS GALE:

We are three young girls, 18 years of age and we have been reading your column for some time. We have gone out with quite a number of fellows from our town and we have found that the girls who smoke, drink and neck are very much more popular than the ones that hold a fellow at arm's length. We have tried both ways and find the latter more successful. Why is this? Why does a fellow call a girl a poor sport when she refuses a drink or a smoke? And why is it that a fellow does not care to spend an evening with a girl who doesn't neck?

Do you want to be popular solely because you will drink and pet? There is nothing flattering about such friendships. You are mistaken in thinking that you cannot be popular unless you are a "good sport." Be proud enough to show that you can be liked without petting.

Broken-Hearted

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been going with a young man for a year and a half. Although he never told me he loved me, I believed from his actions he did. Now he is going to discontinue keeping company with me for a month to find out his real feeling for me. Do you think he would do this if he really loved me? I love him dearly, in fact, better than anything or anybody else. BROKEN-HEARTED.

I think he is doing a wise thing, if he is in doubt as to his feelings. You should be glad that he wants to be sure before marrying you, my dear.

Jane

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been introduced to a fellow just lately. When he went on his vacation he wrote me a letter telling me how much he loves me. I don't love this boy and did not answer his letter. Did I do right? After he came back he told me again that he loves me and wants me to answer his letter. Should I? JANE.

If you don't like the boy, pay no attention to his request, my dear.

A Sad Lad

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of your column. I think you give excellent advice. This is the first I have written to you, but I am hoping you will answer this letter, because I need your advice very badly and need it before it's too late. I am a young boy in my early teens. About three months ago I met a girl whom I loved dearly. She said she loved me, too. Now I hear she has another friend whom she care more for than I. She even tells me that if she would kiss me she would kiss him more than that. I know you will say I'm too young, but please forget that for a minute and advise me. If she permitted me to kiss should I accept? We have articles of each others'. Should these be returned? I don't agree with you on the kissing question and don't think I ever will. A SAD LAD.

The girl is too young to know her own mind, of course, and her interest is apt to go from one boy to another for several years. Keep her for a friend, but don't expect to be the only one. Don't kiss her.

WHAT'S the ANSWER?

1. What is meant by Valhalla?
2. In what field of science was Sir Joseph Lister distinguished?
3. Who was the famous son of Louis Dauphin and Marie-Josephe of Saxony? Who was his ill-fated queen?

Horoscopes

Sunday, October 23

Do you, I say, simply and freely choose the best and hold it fast?—MARCUS AURELIUS.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds portent of certain precipitate moves or disruptions, which, seeming ominous, may eventuate in stabilizing the fortunes. However, it is advised that the attention be concentrated on spiritual activities.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of stirring events, abrupt and probably unlooked for, but in the long run the fortunes may benefit, especially if handled with diplomacy and prudence, or in agreement with close corporations.

A child born on this day should be original and independent, but may succeed in public position or with large corporation through prudence and diplomacy, as well as perseverance and industry.

Notable Nativity: Thomas Pinckney, American statesman.

Monday, October 24

According to a long chain of conflicting lunar and mutual aspects, this day may bring forth situations and opportunities which will call for much wise direction and business acumen. There may be critical and unexpected circumstances as well as compensatory openings and alliances which may turn the balance to the profitable side of the ledger. But tact and good judgment are required.

Those whose birthday it is will have a year to test their mettle as well as their discretion and business acumen. But there will be good opportunities for success and valuable connections. A child born on this day may be ambitious and independent, possibly erratic and spectacular, but it may have many opportunities in life with talents and skill to grasp them.

Notable Nativity: George W. Hough, American astronomer.

What Type Are Your Friends?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHAT girl is not eagerly interested in making and holding friends?

Thousands of years ago, a king noted for wisdom gave a suggestion regarding friendship that is worth considering, for it applies now, as perfectly as it did in 1000 B. C., to friendships of men and women:

"A man that hath friends must show himself friendly."

Friendliness attracts friendship as surely as the sun attracts sunflowers. In fact, friendliness may well be called the sunshine of the heart. Why dwell in the gloomy, dank twilight of hatred, caustic criticism and bitterness, when you can open all the windows of your mind and heart to fresh, warm sunlight, by cultivating friendliness toward all.

A friendly attitude does not prevent you from being hard-boiled as far as your good sense and judgment are concerned. It does not blind you to the faults of others or the need of discretion in making friends. But the friendly girl sees the good as well as the bad. She tries to understand rather than condemn. She realizes that all men and women and all dumb animals are trying, however blindly, to do what seems to them best. All suffer as well as enjoy. Hence her sympathy and liking go out to all life, and she wishes to add to the general happiness and good and lessen suffering. Friendliness should be a girl's attitude toward the entire world.

But when it comes to friendships—that is a different matter! A girl's associates have such an enormous influence on her point of view, her success, her romance, that she can't afford to drift into friendships which are a waste of time or worse still, encourage her to think, say and do things of which she is secretly ashamed.

Anne for instance, met at the office a girl who took a liking to her and immediately made herself Anne's constant companion and chum. Joan was bright and lively, and her interest flattered quiet Anne. So when Joan suggested that the two take an apartment, Anne eagerly consented, although she really knew very little about Joan and that little was not altogether in her favor.

When the two girls were finally established in a tiny apartment, which was far more expensive than Anne could afford, Anne found herself forced into a "crowd" of Joan's friends that shocked all her ideas of what is right and fine.

Necking and drinking parties took place nightly. Every morning Joan went to the office leaving a littered, dirty apartment after her all-night celebrations. Sometimes she would remain away a night or two at a particularly wild party.

Anne never took part in these affairs. More and more she withdrew into herself, wretched and lonely. She kept the apartment neat and tried in vain to keep Joan straight. Joan's crowd laughed at Anne. They called her prim, old-fashioned, narrow-minded. But the men liked her innocent sweet ways.

"You'll never get anywhere unless you wake up," was Joan's advice. "You're living in 1927 Anne, not 1882, and you will have to keep up with the pace or be left behind."

Anne was loyalty itself to Joan because she felt Joan needed her. Finally, however, she awoke to the fact that their friendship was not really congenial on either side and that Joan was using her as a convenience and blind. So she broke away and went to live with some old friends of her parents who had recently moved to the city.

Anne is happily married today to a young man she met at the office. Bob began taking a deep interest in Anne when she took a definite stand against close companionship with Joan.

"It was a long time before I realized what a really sweet, adorable girl you are," Bob confided to his bride. "I nearly lost you altogether. You see I concluded that any girl who chummed with Joan was like Joan."

If you wish to improve your mind, increase your power of enjoying life, help others to enjoy life and attract the right kind of friends, the right sweetheart and life partner, mingle whenever you can, with people who read good books, appreciate good pictures, like good music, avoid ill-natured gossip and who above all, are wholesome and upright in character.

Having made good friends, prove yourself a good friend. Rule out jealousy. Do not exact too much. Do your share.

You are judged—and rightly judged—by your friends. You may lose the chance of a lifetime for business success, or, far more serious, the love of The Man, by gaining the reputation of being one who "travels in a fast set."

Be friendly with all your acquaintances. But cultivate the friendship of those who share your ideals. Then one of these worthwhile friendships will in all probability lead you to romance and happy marriage.

THE BUBBLE OF BEAUTY

Drawn by
NELL BRINKLEY

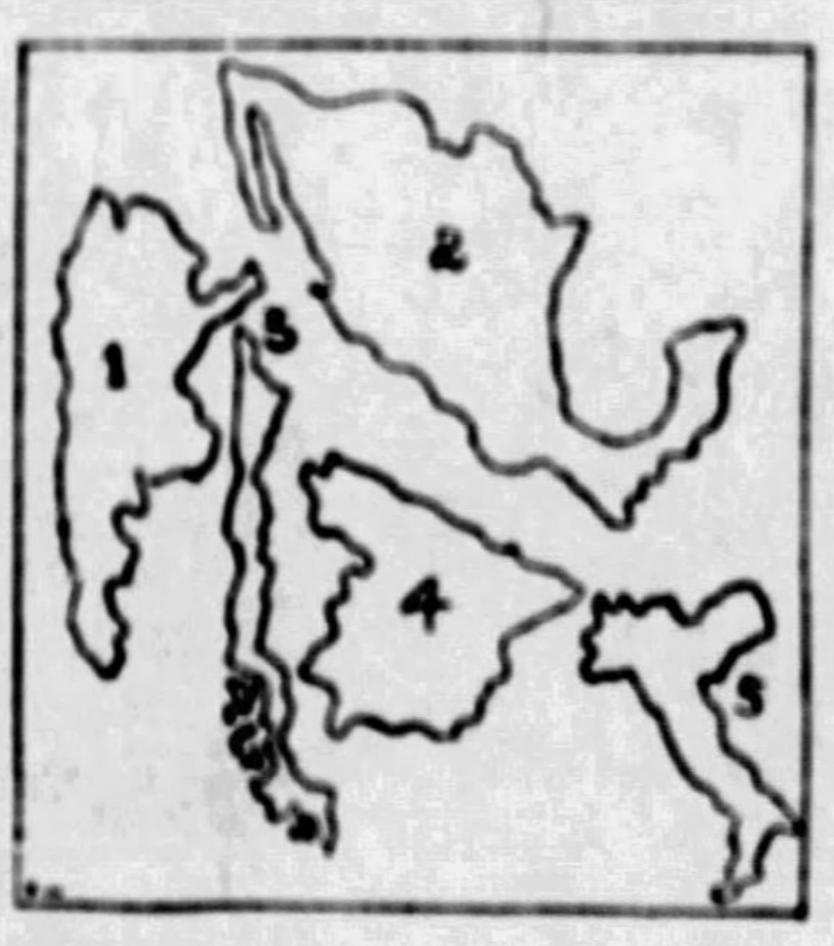
THE perfect beauty of extreme youth vanishes like a bubble blown from the lips—the rosy lips of Love. The very outermost skin of beauty does. But if that Beauty is made of the least thing more-lovely character, goodness, kindness, a sunny heart, faith, loyalty—it only turns into another thing when just the material, outer surface has vanished before your eyes, turns into some other and more substantial loveliness. A bubble DOESN'T, I know, so my likeness ends there. Unless even a bubble has a soul, if we had eyes to see it with.

That beauty that has not goodness goes out the soonest. Lasts no longer than an eye-wink in the immensity of time! And friends look and stare and wonder at the change when a lovely face is not only beautiful no longer, but even LESS beautiful than some other faces that have always been plain. Beauty with goodness, as most real beauty is companioned, only changes—never goes.

So if you are beautiful, lucky girl, try to be good along with it—so that you may hold your beauty. So that suddenly it may not leave you with that iridescent haste with which the fragile, multi-colored bubble leaves this world!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

TEASERS



Countries

Here we have the outlines of five countries—just as they appear upon the map.

Naturally they are not in their correct proportions—each one must be considered separately. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are American countries; 4 and 5 are European.

Look them over and try to name each one.

Yesterday's Teaser

Words were right and wrong as follows: Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 9 and 10 wrong; others correct.

To check all 10 words correctly is exceptional; 9, very good; 8, good; 7, average; 6, fair; less than 5, poor.

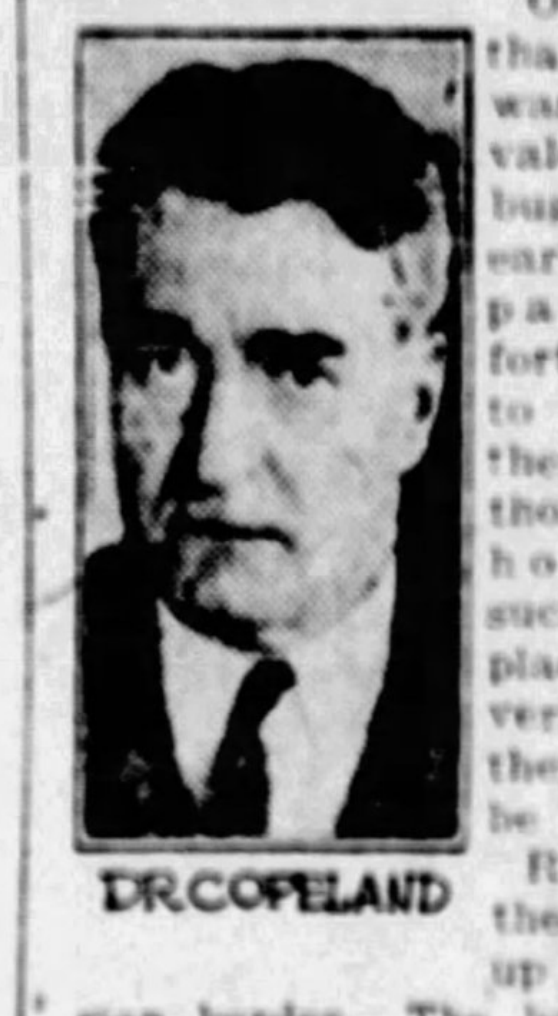
HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.
U.S. Senator from New York

Danger of Insect and Animal Pests

NOT long ago I read a very interesting book about the establishment of religious organizations in the state of Michigan. One of the things that impressed me was what those early missionaries had to put up with as regards living conditions. The homes of the period were extremely crude and many times dirty, I fear.



DR COPELAND

One thing that struck me was the prevalence of bed-bugs in that early day. No particular effort was made to get rid of them. Perhaps those old log houses gave such hiding places for these vermin that they could not be destroyed.

Right after the war I went up to the Russian border. The bad food was nothing compared to the annoyance caused by vermin.

One of the professors of Cambridge University wrote a book called "The Minor Horrors of War." He spoke of "animals which work in darkness and in stealth, little animals which in times of peace we politely ignore, yet little animals which in times of war may make or unmake an army corps."

"We are shy of mentioning these organisms in times of peace," he said, "but all of them are within the cognizance of every medical officer of health and of every police court missionary. These gentlemen do not talk about them in general society; the subject is as a rule 'taboo.' Yet if we face these troubles with courage and frankness, they can be overcome."

Lice, bed-bugs, fleas, moths, flies, mosquitoes, mites and ticks are the chief insect pests. Rats and mice, and to a lesser degree, other animals of the same family, are among the horrors of peace and war.

Ants and other bugs, as well as some worms, spiders and various stinging insects, together with the poisonous snakes, are other forms of animal life of interest to the physician. But the animal pests I have in mind today are the disease carrying pests. Because they can convey the germs of disease, they should be destroyed, or, at least, our homes should be so kept as to make their entrance impossible.

I want you to see what these pests can do:

The mosquito is the one and only means for carrying malaria, yellow fever and one or two other tropical diseases.

The flea carries the plague and the tick transmits relapsing fever. Any insect, like the fly, ant or cockroach, that feeds on fecal matter and decayed food or garbage, can carry germs to the food and drink of the human family.

The germs of cholera and bowel fever and even tuberculosis, Park says, can grow in the intestines of the fly. It is a dangerous insect.

The common house rat and mouse are under suspicion as carriers of disease, as also are all the biting bugs. They should not be tolerated. The house should be freed of them.

No child should be permitted to go about with lice. They are an offense against decency and are a menace to health.

You must not permit rubbish to accumulate in cellar or attic. When it does it becomes a breeding place for rats and mice and is a fire hazard, too.

Every crack and crevice in wall and floor should be filled in with paint or putty. Do not leave a single hiding place for insect life. Watch the bed joints and other places in the furniture where they can conceal themselves. They are smart as smart can be.

For the sake of the health and lives of your family get rid of all disease-carrying animal life. You cannot afford to take the chances they offer.

Answers to Health Queries

M. L. G. Q.—My 12-year-old daughter is troubled with a cracking knee joint. The knee has never been injured that I know of and she is very active and healthy, but is growing very fast. What would you advise? At times the knee pains a little.

A.—The trouble is very likely due to a lack of synovial fluid around the joint. Be sure there is no rheumatic tendency. Massaging the parts with warm cod liver oil upon retiring should be helpful, and if very painful, the knee may be bandaged during the daytime until the parts are strong.

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

LIGHTING THE FLAME OF LOVE

CONSIDER my maxims and heed my wisdom, oh my Daughter.

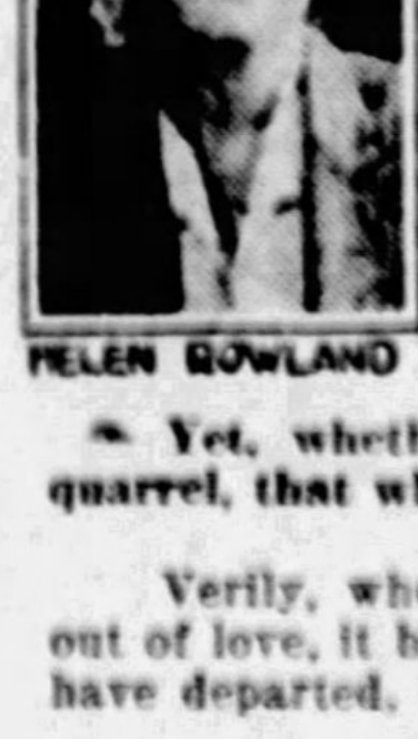
For, lo, I have known one man well, and many men a little; and they are unto me, more simple than words of one syllable, and more easily read than the electric sign upon Main street. Yet, where I have been STUNG, thou mayest walk in safety.

* * *

I charge thee, seek not to light the flame in a man's heart by flinging kerosene upon it, but let the fire of love burn SLOWLY; for the end thereof is ashes!



HELEN ROWLAND

Go to. Love is not like unto a holocaust which burneth out within the hour; but like unto a rice pudding which simmereth long over a light flame. And a wise damsel knoweth when it is done; but a foolish damsel continueth to pile on the fuel and stir up the fire until it is BURNT OUT.

* * *

Behold, when a man first kisseth a damsel, her thoughts leap unto the altar; she sigheth for an avowal and a solitaire and yearneth to "settle things."

* * *

Yet, whether it be love or a question, or champagne or a quarrel, that which is "settled" is FINISHED in a man's eyes.

* * *

Verily, when the uncertainty passeth and the DOUBT goeth out of love, it becometh as wine wherefrom the fizz and the sparkle have departed, exceeding flat.

* * *

Behold, after the third kiss, a damsel is like unto a cross-word puzzle that hath been solved; a novel, the last chapter of which hath been read in advance!

But a WIFE is like unto a book that hath been read from the beginning unto the end. She holdeth NO surprises. For, how can a man find novelty in a woman, when he knoweth the ingredients of her make-up, the source of her beauty, and all the workings of her mind?

* * *

How shall he wax sentimental concerning the waves of her hair when he hath paid the bill for her "permanent?" How shall he be thrilled by her "subtle fragrance" when he knoweth the exact price of her sachet and her bath-salts?

* * *

Go to, my Daughter. Seek not to hasten a man's love; for forced fruit lacketh flavor; but the sweet melon ripeneth slowly in the sun. And the tenderest kiss is the one that hath not YET been taken!

* * *

Verily, verily, a man's love is not a "continuity" but a dazzling "revue" with a constant change of words, music and scenery.

Blessed is the woman that knoweth when the play is OVER; for she shall "wake up" in time, and depart before the lights are out!

* * *

IF it becomes necessary for Ritzy Rosey to powder her nose she is fortified with her vanity case. You don't see it? Well, it's in the little pocket at the side of her vanity boot. They're very new and so is her Russian tunic costume. Jin, totally indifferent to his mistress' charms, is feeling quite content over the fact that Ritzy left his lash at home.

The most welcome customer

STORES welcome her—salespeople smile and work cheerfully to carry out her slightest wish. Shopping is a joy, and, at the end of a busy day, she feels satisfied and confident that every purchase will be just what she planned it to be. Most welcome shopper!

Who is she? She is your modern shopper, possessed of good judgment and the power of decision. She plans her purchases. Knows what she wants. Politely insists on getting it, and does get it.

Customers of this type realize that every economic waste is ultimately paid for by the public and so they strive not only to avoid waste themselves but also to lend encouragement to every public movement in this direction.

Pittsburgh merchants have no desire to limit in any way the legitimate exercise of the exchange privilege. They merely seek public cooperation in a movement designed to correct abuses which lay a heavy toll upon store and public alike.

Are you one of "the most welcome customers?" If so, you know the comfort of pleasant contacts with salespeople, you see everything you wish to see, save time, and usually find exactly what you want.

Financial Center Arise: N. Y. Banks Go to Brooklyn.

By B. C. FORBES

THE best news is agricultural. At last the great Northwest is rising from its depression. With the agricultural South doing well and the Far West keeping up steam, our farming states promise to enjoy a fairer share of our national prosperity. Indeed, it may be that agriculture will fare better than industry in coming months. And perhaps better, also, than the Wall Street stock market.

Is there any significance in the fact that savings deposits have lately shown decrease at not a few centers?

NEW YORK no longer monopolizes the raising of large blocks of capital in this country. It sponsored less than half of last month's 77 offerings of the million-dollars-and-upward class. Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Detroit, Pittsburgh, New Orleans, Seattle and other cities have grown greatly in financial importance.

Los Angeles has just achieved a very notable piece of local financing. The famous Bullock's Store, developed over two decades by John G. Bullock, desired to raise $8,500,000 and called into consultation J. Dabney Day, president of the Citizens National Bank of Los Angeles, and its affiliated trust company and security company. Dr. Day promptly replied that all the money could be supplied very readily at home.

Forthwith, $4,000,000 of 6 per cent bonds and $4,500,000 of preferred stock were offered Californians.

The result? The entire amount was several times oversubscribed.

Financing of local enterprises by local bankers and investors is a healthy, gratifying development. There is no reason why powerful American cities should depend upon Wall Street whenever new local capital, even in large amounts, is needed. From all appearances, Wall Street will be kept busy enough with gigantic foreign loans and domestic issues of enormous magnitude.

Chicago and San Francisco recently announced plans for local call money markets.

A progressive step.

Reports from Florida are distinctly more encouraging.

Leading hotels report gratifyingly heavy reservations for the coming season.

ONE by one New York's leading bankers are crossing the river to Brooklyn. Brooklyn is growing rapidly as a business city—due perhaps to the increasing traffic congestion in the main business sections on Manhattan Island.

This week the 103-year-old Chemical National Bank opened its first Brooklyn branch and, judging from the number of influential Brooklynites who attended the opening ceremonies, the advent of New York financial institutions is very cordially welcomed.

BANKING developments of tremendous importance are going on, usually under the surface, in many parts of the country. The buying up of bank stocks by incorporated concerns is rather a new movement which is spreading enormously. I hear that the New York state authorities do not relish the transition of control of banks from individual stockholders to corporations and that preventive steps may be instituted.

Nevertheless, the probabilities all are that bank control will gravitate into fewer and fewer hands, whether we like the idea or not.

FORD is preparing to build a $5,000,000 plant at Long Beach and Firestone and Goodrich plants of almost equal magnitude at Los Angeles.

These and other cheerful developments were rattled off by Joe Toplitzky, Los Angeles real estate magnate, during a talk in New York this week. Building permits taken out in Los Angeles last month reached $18,000,000. The Biltmore Hotel is adding 500 to its present 1,000 rooms. The city authorities are actively spending many millions of dollars in widening streets and boulevards to take care of the constantly increasing traffic.

Los Angeles county can boast of 60 per cent of all the automobiles in California.

The starting of work on Boulder Dam—now regarded as assured—will open a dazzling new era for California. Californians confidently proclaim.

R. H. BALLARD, the Southern California Edison, another visitor to New York, mentioned that his company has planned new capital expenditures amounting to $100,000,000 in the next three years. The telephone people are already getting ready for a city of 2,000,000 people.

In these days of uncertainty and misgiving in Wall Street, it is delightfully refreshing to run into red-blooded, thorough-going, cheerio Californians.

CHALK this up for Chicago: Chicago bank deposits are today the highest in the city's history, $2,880,000,000.

Price Movements Are Narrow Here

Stocks continued to display a firm to steady tone in the short session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. One or two recessions from previous closing levels were noted, but they were fractional declines and were not accompanied by any noticeable increase in volume. Lone Star Gas registered a further slight recession following its narrow downturn in the Friday session.

During the first hour one block of 4,800 shares of Lone Star changed hands at 51, the trade being handled by one house which "matched" the order. Westinghouse Electric sagged under 80 for the first time on the present move, the recession being in reflection of the general weakness on the New York exchange. Trading in the glass division was confined generally to United States Glass, which registered a further gain. Standard Sanitary and National Fireproofing preferred were both unchanged in the early dealings.

In the second hour there was some improvement in prices noted in the leading issues. The 51-mark proved to have been the low on Lone Star and subsequent transactions were in the upward direction. Standard Sanitary firmed up to 101. Arkansas Gas came into the market unchanged at 8⅞, but not much stock was available at that figure. However, at 9 there was sufficient supply to hold the market stationary.

STOCK MARKET TURNS DOWN SHARPLY

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—(AP.)—For the fourth consecutive session, the main course of stock prices today was sharply downward. Feeble rallies developed now and then, but the higher prices invariably invited a flood of new offerings as weakened marginal accounts were thrown over and "bear" traders put out new short lines. The retreat, with few exceptions, was an orderly one. Houston, which sustained a net loss of 14 points yesterday, broke 8 more today, Case Threshing Machine collapsed 9, and Baldwin nearly 7.

Most of the leading railroad and industrial issues broke to new low levels on the current decline, some of them selling 20 to 40 points below the high levels established last month. The reaction, like those which preceded it, was regarded as a belated correction of a top-heavy speculative position.

Marine preferred sank to a new low level for the year on the decision of a New Jersey court, upsetting the proposed recapitalization plan. Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley, Westinghouse Airbrake and Advance Rumely, all sank to new low levels for the year.

There were a few bright spots in the market. Dodge Brothers preferred, which sold at 56⅛ a few days ago, on fears for the safety of the dividend, sold today at 63 on official assurance that the regular payments would be sustained.

The closing was weak. Total sales approximated 1,300,000 shares.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Phillips Net Dwindles.

Phillips Petroleum reports for September quarter net of $4,614,244 after charges and Federal taxes, but before depreciation and depletion against net of $10,626,579 in the September, 1926 quarter. Nine months net was $15,443,153 as compared with $24,827,594 in the 1926 period. No reason exists why directors of Phillips Petroleum should not declare the regular dividend at their November meeting, Frank Phillips, president, said on his departure for Europe. He thought the worst in the oil industry had passed and that a period of improvement was approaching.

Houston Oil.

Houston Oil Company of Texas and Houston Pipe Line Company reports for September quarter: Net income was $407,164 after interest, depreciation and depletion against $457,122 in the preceding quarter. Net income for nine months amounted to $1,345,787 after depreciation and depletion, against $2,210,154 before reserves in the 1926 period.

September Motor Production.

United States automobile production in September totaled 251,577 units of which 221,012 were passenger cars and 32,164 trucks, the Commerce Department announces. Canadian production totaled 11,262 units, of which 8,681 were passenger cars and 2,581 trucks. United States production for nine months totaled 2,651,734 cars of which 2,509,013 were passenger cars and 242,716 trucks. Canadian production during nine months was 161,543 units of which 133,184 were passenger cars and 28,333 trucks.

Goodyear Buys Sumatra Land.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company has purchased 20,000 acres of rubber growing land in Sumatra from a Japanese syndicate. This purchase brings Goodyear's plantation holdings in the Far East to 50,000 acres. The first plantation was started in 1916.

Pennsylvania Loadings.

Total loaded cars handled by Pennsylvania Railroad System for the week ended October 15 were 176,449, which compares with 171,111 in preceding week and 191,310 in corresponding week of 1926. For the period from January 1 to October 15 loaded cars handled totaled 6,791,293, which compares with 7,054,923 in the corresponding period of 1926, a decrease of 3.7 per cent.

September Structural Orders.

Orders of fabricated structural steel in September were 76 per cent of capacity, total orders being 209,242 tons reported by fabricators with a capacity of 273,455 tons a month, compared with August orders of 74 per cent capacity and 59 per cent a year ago, Commerce Department announces. For nine months ended September 30 orders received were 71 per cent of capacity, against 67 per cent for same period last year.

Bayuk Earnings Up.

Bayuk Cigars, Inc., reports for September quarter net income was $237,463 after charges including Federal taxes, equal after preferred dividends to $3.49 a share on 77,121 shares of common stock outstanding, against $247,140 or $3.44 a share on the common in the September, 1926, quarter. For nine months ended September 30, net income totaled $944,357 or $9.43 a common share, as against $666,432 or $6.55 a share in the 1926 period.

BUGS BAER Says

FOLLOWING the article on the carnivorous habit of motor car owners of placing mountain howitzers on their radiator caps we have received many indignant letters from stampless correspondents.

The original idea of the radiator cap was to prevent the steam in the cylinders from mingling with the oil in the drip pan and thereby preventing the transmission from moulting during the repair season.

The reason why our motor cars have multiplied so rapidly is that they are protected by the government which keeps the traffic cops away from their mechanical nesting grounds in Detroit.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The radiator cap is a reminder of the age when cars had not yet developed their six-seating power and citizens used to hang Chinese lanterns on the handlebars of their bicycles.

It served its purpose of keeping the water inside the cylinder jackets until the radiator burst and was a selling point that made the junkman the ultimate consumer.

Like a button on a flowered vest, the radiator cap was humble but essential.

As cars developed in size, power and instalments, the radiator cap failed to keep pace with the fashions.

It was overlooked by designers who figured it was a good place to hang a grease rag.

Its possibilities were discovered accidentally by the driver of a moving van who tied a potted geranium on the hood while transporting furniture over a national highway of back alleys.

It looks so pretty that the neighbors got jealous and encouraged parrots and bullfrogs to perch on the radiator cap. This stunt was elaborated upon until we now see bronchos, diving venuses and Olympic disc tossers riding on the hoods of cars without paying fares.

We have no objection to these ornaments so long as they are kept inside the building line. But when you are negotiating the tropical zone of traffic with a couple of flat feet that refuse to steer it becomes very annoying when a chicken hawk on a hood reaches out and grabs your toupee.

They may be beautiful hunks of sculpture, but they are as dangerous as a pitchfork in a loal of hay.

"You Said It Marceline!"

By MARCELINE d'ALROY

ON "PLAYING ON MEN"

Women USED to think
That to MARRY a
WIDOWER was NOT so good,
It was like playing
SECOND FIDDLE,
And they would have PREFERRED to have been
His FIRST. Girls NOW are WISER. And MANY prefer
A man who has been Married ONCE or TWICE before, because They KNOW he will
NOT expect so MUCH
From THEM.
And another thing,
WOMEN, these days, have CEASED to think of Themselves
As exquisitely FRAIL
INSTRUMENTS on which MEN have a RIGHT to Play, strum or improvise.
Instead, they see
Themselves as the PLAYER
And MAN as an instrument
Just FULL of good
Looking NOTES.
And men who have been Married ONCE know that
If they WANT harmony
They must PAY for it.

The American Congress Owes It to Our Service Dead To Send United States Gold Star Mothers to France

CONGRESS has one great duty, yet unperformed, towards the heroic dead of the nation who fell in the World War.

That duty is to provide transportation for American war mothers to visit the graves of their sons in France, Great Britain and Belgium.

The sadness and heaviness of loss has been multiplied in the hearts of tens of thousands of mothers by the thought that their loved ones were to lie forever under foreign soil.

To the separation of spirit is added the separation of the vast ocean. All that remains of the sacrifice offered on the altar of her country lies in an alien grave which may not be hallowed by the tears and prayers of an American mother.

The country which received such a sacrifice cannot do less than send American gold star mothers over the sea to pay their last tribute to the boys who never came back to them.

OF the 77,771 who died in the A. E. F. during the War, 30,812 bodies remain in Europe, buried in American cemeteries, which are maintained by the United States War Department.

The largest of our military cemeteries abroad is the "Meuse-Argonne Cemetery" at Romagne-sous-Montfaucon in France, about 20 miles northwest of Verdun. It has in all 14,107 graves. The soldiers who rest there came from almost every combat division of the American Expeditionary Forces. Most of them gave their lives in the Meuse-Argonne operation, the greatest battle in American history, and probably the most decisive offensive of the war.

Then there is the Oise-Aisne Cemetery, located near Fere-en-Tardenois, about 15 miles east of Chateau Thierry. It has 5,946 graves. The boys who lie there are mainly from the Third, Fourth, Twenty-eighth, Thirty-second, Forty-second and Seventy-seventh Divisions, who fought in the vicinity of the Ourcq River and as far north as the Oise.

The third largest is the St. Mihiel Cemetery, near Thiaucourt, about 18 miles southwest of Metz, with the graves of 4,141 soldiers. Most of these were members of the First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Twenty-sixth, Forty-second, Eighty-second, Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth Divisions, which made the attack in the great offensive action of the American Army that resulted in the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient. Many soldiers from the Seventh, Twenty-sixth, Thirty-seventh, Seventy-eighth and Ninety-second Divisions also lie here.

At the foot of the hill upon which stands Belleau Wood is the Aisne-Marne Cemetery, with 2,212 graves, including 320 marines who fell at Belleau. The dead are mainly from the First Second, Third, Fourth, Twenty-Sixth, Twenty-eighth, Thirty-second, Forty-second Divisions.

THE Somme Cemetery lies near Bony, 11 miles north of St. Quentin, with the graves of 1,826 soldiers, mostly from the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions, though there are also men here who fell during the operations of the First Division near Cantigny and the Thirty-third Division east of Amiens. In Suresnes, overlooking the Seine River, on the slope of Mont Valerien, near Paris, is an American cemetery with 1,506 graves, mostly soldiers who died in hospitals in or near Paris during the war.

The 437 graves in England are in the American section of the large British Brookwood Cemetery, located 28 miles southwest of London. The bodies buried here were concentrated after the armistice and consist of those members of the American Expeditionary Forces who lost their lives in or near England during the war.

In the Flanders Field Cemetery at Waereghem, Belgium, halfway between Brussels and Ypres, are 365 graves in ground fought over by the Ninety-first Division. The soldiers buried there are mainly those of the Thirty-seventh and Ninety-first Divisions, who fought in the vicinity, and men of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions, who fought near Ypres.

A PILGRIMAGE to these hallowed shrines by 20,000 American gold star mothers would be one of the most solemn and impressive events in our history.

It would be a moving protest against the cruel and wicked waste of war which would catch the imagination of the entire world. The expedition would be a mighty crusade for international peace.

The trip should be made under the auspices of the War Department, which maintains the cemeteries and can supply guides for the European battlefields.

The direct escort of the women should, however, be provided by the American Red Cross, best fitted to conduct such an errand of mercy.

Here is an object worthy of the attention of Congress and of the country. In the midst of our plans and expenditures — unfortunately necessary — to guard against future wars, let us not neglect the final and greatest service that we can perform for the victims of the last terrible conflict.

A European pilgrimage of American gold star mothers, under the auspices and at the expense of the American Government, deserves the immedinte attention of Congress so that arrangements can be made for the trip early next Summer.

Equal Rights

Few businesses or professions are closed nowadays to women. Parity of the sexes in the matter of earning a living is an accepted fact.

So perhaps the headline: "Woman Arrested for $100,000 Theft" was inevitable, however deplorable.

Nevertheless it would be wrong to suspect in the charge against this secretary accused of betraying her employer's confidence an indication that women are starting to compete with men in a field hitherto tilled almost exclusively by males—the field of commercial trickery and crookedness.

Trustworthiness and honesty are splendidly characteristic of women in business. An isolated instance of apparent feminine wrong-doing should only emphasize the general uprightness of the girl who works.

Sex equality is a modern development full of glorious promise. A sad day for society if it ever extends to crime!

Man's Courage

And Woman's Courage.

You heard men say in equal suffrage battle that women shouldn't demand the vote until ready to go to war. That was said sometimes by men that would not go to war if there was any bed under which they could hide.

Mrs. Andrew Smihula, of Denver, endured for 45 minutes repeated burnings with a hot iron and a cigaret, in the hands of a bandit before she would reveal the hiding place of $27, her savings.

Many men in war have shown less courage than that woman showed.

To which it may be added that many high-spirited male warriors would rather go through ten wars than endure once what millions of women suffer repeatedly and gladly in child-birth.

Movies Are Movies

By DR. FRANK CRANE

At least, they ought to be. I speak only for myself, but as far as I know I am reflecting the opinion of almost every semi-intelligent person I know when I say that we go to a picture house to see a movie and not to see vaudeville.

The vaudeville, I suppose, is all right in its place. People that want to see girls show their alluring forms and to hear songs that nobody understands and to listen to music that is the same thing over and over, no matter what tune they call it, have a right to do so.

But I belong to that large number of people that want to see a picture. I don't care for vaudeville.

It is the custom nowaadys in very many houses, especially the larger ones, to put in a lot of vaudeville stunts, so as to get people to come to the show. They may be right in this — probably the men that run the theater know more about it than I—but I want to put in one vote against the idea. I don't want to see some mountebank perform on the tight rope and I don't want to see any acrobats. I want to see a picture and I carefully inquire what time the picture begins and closes so as to time my visit accordingly. Usually my informant at the theater does not know when the picture begins, but generally tells me wrong, so I usually have to sit through a half hour of vaudeville waiting for the picture to begin.

I am a movie fan. I enjoy a movie and I don't want it mixed with anything else. I have an idea the theater managers are mistaken and that people that want to see vaudeville can go to a vaudeville house and look at it, but that most of the people that come to a moving picture house want to see a picture.

I met a moving picture director the other day who told me the moving picture business was falling off, and that the management was putting in vaudeville to get the people to come.

You can set me down for one vote against the vaudeville and I know several that will vote with me. Cut it out and give us the straight picture and you will earn our undying gratitude.

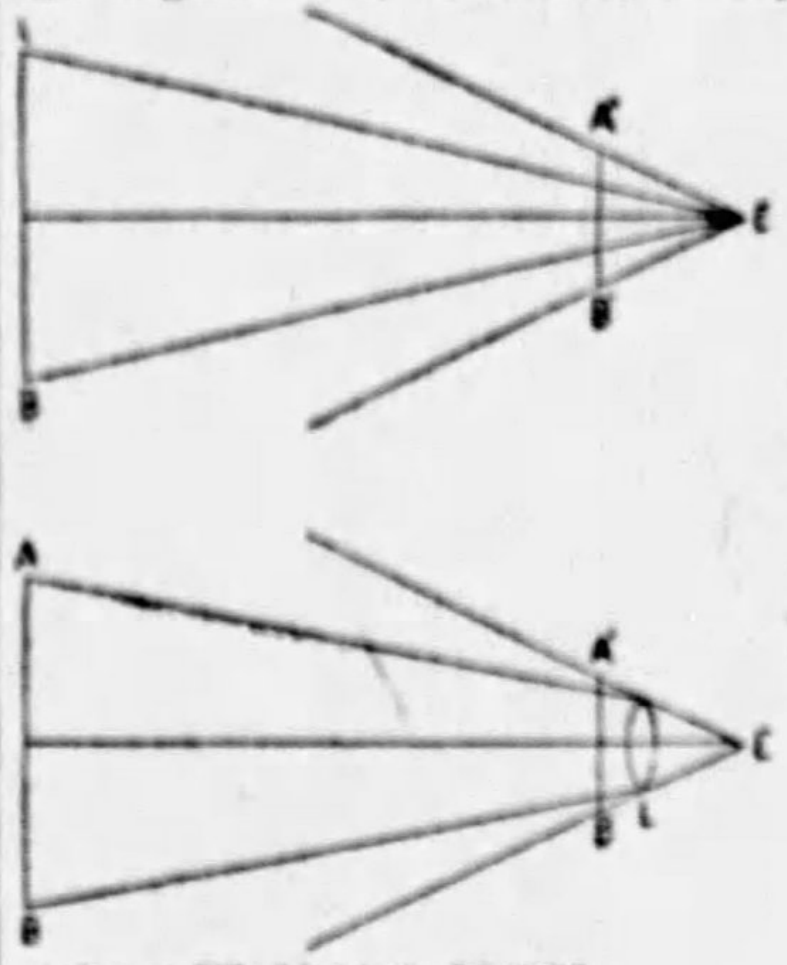
Garrett P Serviss Says:

What Magnification Is

"What makes a telescope and microscope magnify? What kind of a lens do they have?—M. F."

TO EXPLAIN completely the magnifying power of lenses would require elaborate drawings, but the principle can be understood easily from the accompanying double sketch. It shows why a telescope is said to bring the moon as many times nearer as it magnifies its apparent size.

It is a matter of common experience that the size that any object presents to one eye varies directly with its distance. For instance, a tree that is so tall when you are near it that you have to bend your head backward to see its top, shrinks to a short perpendicular object when you are a mile away from it. All objects loom larger as they approach and dwindle as they recede, exactly in proportion to the distance.



HOW A TELESCOPE BRINGS THE MOON NEARER -10-22

The apparent size—or what is more properly called the angular size, or diameter—depends upon the size of the angle formed between the lines of sight drawn to the eye from opposite sides of the object. Now, this angle may be increased by either the approach of the object to the eye or the interposition of a convex lens of glass between the eye and the object.

The equivalence of these two methods of magnification is shown by comparing the upper with the lower diagram in the cut. In the upper case the object "a-b" appears larger to the eye at "e" in proportion as it is placed nearer. Suppose it to be removed from "a-b" to "a-b." Its increase of angular diameter is then shown by the greater size of the angle "a, e, b," in comparison with "a, e, b."

But now look at the lower diagram, where, instead of placing "a-b" nearer to "e," a lens is inserted between the eye at "e" and the object "a-b." The rays of light from the object are bent inward in passing through the lens so that they unite at "e" and form an image of the object, and the eye, regarding this image, sees it apparently widened, so that the lines of sight through its opposite sides takes the directions "e-a" and "e-b," inclosing a larger angle than before.

This is all there is to magnification.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Are You Sympathetic?

SOMETIMES you wonder what has changed you from an unsympathetic person, to one who desires to help a person in hard luck.

Once you thought of the needy person as one who was lazy, or inefficient and not deserving of help.

While you maintain this opinion to a degree, you now realize that one may be needy and yet not to blame for his condition of want.

You are one of thousands who have changed their mental attitude toward unfortunates in recent years.

It is a tendency brought about to a great extent by large organizations which have banded men and women together for the general benefit mankind.

You are fortunate if you are mentally and physically equipped to earn much more than your material life demands.

Nets of Songs

HOW long have men woven the bright nets of song; songs of conquest, of laughter, of loving, how long! They have snared all earth's joys in their songs' splendid notes as the paeans of bliss have welled up from their throats. In the dawn of creation, when time was yet young, they lifted their faces to heaven as they sung: when the sun on their lances glowed fiery and bright the tale of their triumphs they voiced with delight. Of toil and endeavors the slow ages through, of climbing and grasping for goals ever new, of men by their labors made pure and grown strong, all the story is woven in fabric of song. Would you learn of man's course through the centuries long? You will find it all woven in bright nets of song!

The Hopeless Chest

By ALEXANDER CAIRNS

WHAT a world of romance is locked up in every hope chest in the world! There is nothing more beautiful in the life of a wholesome young woman unless it be her rosy cheeks and her cherry lips.

But, Madame Chairman, I rise to say a word for the Hopeless Chest, the chest that may never consummate in a Lohengrin March or a ring of orange blossoms. Alas, are there not many of them in the great teeming world of the unwed?

Pardon, Madame, for my apparent presumption of a knowledge of the privacy of milady's hope chest. But do not men have wives and sisters and sweethearts, and may not the pedagogy of married years help them to interpret smiles and smirks and clandestine whisperings?

May I not suggest then, that the Hope Chest contains nothing that may not also be tucked away into the Hopeless Chest. The little dainties and pretties and delicacies will surely beautify the life and ornament the home some gladsome day even though no Lochinvar comes out of the West.

Moreover, there is a whole long shopping list of gems and jewels which fair Juliet may forget to tuck in between the doilies and draperies unless the items are whispered into her dainty ear. And what puts this list in the elite class is that they will not only enrich the afterwhile woman whether Romeo comes or not, but they will do most to insure his coming.

Put into the chest then two little animals, bear and forbear; bear with another's petulance and forbear to say or do the petulant thing. And the "good-turn" habit which the Scouts shall not monopolize and which leaves the highway for the byway to seek the daffodils and cowslips of kindly service. And the friendly habit which will burn on when passionate love grows cool. And a skillful hand that can not only interpret Beethoven but also serves a tempting omelet. And a cultured mind keen to the dear nuances of literary beauty and alive to the problems that try men's souls. And a strong pair of balances that can weigh out the worthy from the worthless. And a sense of art that will make every room a sanctuary and every alcove a shrine.

After all, Madame Chairman, how can any chest be hopeless that is filled cover-full with such a list of beauties and utilities?

And what say you, fair Juliet?

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—This is a true story of what happened to Harrison Fisher, the magazine cover illustrator, on a recent jaunt to New York. Mr. Fisher was aroused early by the charming voice of the wife of a motion picture star. It was her celebrated husband's birthday. She was giving a dinner that evening to 15 especially selected friends.

Would Mr. Fisher honor him? He had a very important business matter to be discussed with a magazine editor at dinner, but he would. He broke the engagement, salvaged his dinner clothes form his trunk and gave the valet $5 to have them brought back steaming.

The dinner was set for nine o'clock, but, knowing ways of movie folk, Mr. Fisher deposited his gloves, stick and top hat with the hat check girl at 9:20. He walked across the dining room floor in immaculate splendor to the table of the star, banked with roses for 15.

Mr. Fisher approached him with hand extended. The host glanced at him a trifle icily, as did the hostess. Thinking he was unrecognized in his sleekly pressed habiliments, he explained: "I'm Harrison Fisher. Congratulations on your birthday."

The star stood and offered his hand a little aloofly. Mr. Fisher gulped, stood on one foot and then the other while a starched collar wilted. Grasping blindly for some topic, he hit upon the weather and made a highly original observation about that.

No one had as yet indicated his seat so he turned to the hostess with the bright notion he had solved the problem with: "It is difficult to distinguish a guest from a waiter at dinners these days." She apparently did not even catch that on the third bounce.

Then the star spoke and remarked: "It has been a pleasure to see you. We all are pleased," and turned away. The distance from the table to the hat check room seemed to Mr. Fisher like crossing the Mojave desert, but he made it without fainting.

"What is the answer?" I asked Fisher.

"There is no answer," he said, with a deprecatory shrug. "Just movie folks." That was a year ago and to this day there has been no explanation.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

THIS incident illustrates the underhand methods of Edison's enemies in the early days of electric lighting. A representative of a large gas company tried to ruin a lighting demonstration. He had a wire with which he was going to connect several lamps, causing a "short circuit." But he was caught and ejected.

ONE hundred thousand dollars was a lot of money in the early days of the electric light. Edison tells how "one of the wealthiest men in New York" offered him that amount, in addition to paying him for his interests, if he would "sell out" his associates in electric lighting. True to his standards, he scorned the offer.

BETWEEN Edison and the late C. P. Steinmetz, electrical genius, there was mutual admiration. Steinmetz said of Edison: "He has done more than any other man to promote the art and science of electrical engineering." Among other admirers of Edison these scientists might be mentioned: Tyndall, Von Helmholtz, Pasteur.

WHEN the headquarters of the Edison Electric Lighting Company were at 65 Fifth avenue, New York, many notable people of the day were callers. One of the most prominent of these was the late J. Pierpont Morgan, who, with Henry Villard and other financiers, was a company stockholder. (Continued Monday.)
